To the Reader.

IT is not the thirst of empty glory that makes me runne hazard of your censure, but a consideration of the weaknesse of Schoolemasters, who undertake to read the Greeke Orators to raw Schollers, themselves being not ripe in the Attick castomes. I have therefore so farre endeavoured as you see. If any thing may afford a scruple to any, he shall engage me that will require satisfaction. If any thing seems amisse, it shall be taken by me as a favour to heare of it from any. For I am not of those whose ears are stops, when their errors are told them. If this please it shall adde spurres to the finishing of this course intended; and as occasion may give leave, you shall have the rest that may be spoken.

BY the the sonnes of Noah * were the Iles of a Gen. 10. 5. the Gentiles divided in their lands, every one after his tongue; when by their audacious folly they would have mounted up to heaven, thinking to leave a name to posterity, by building Castles in the ayre. From which attempt p roceeded that which before they were jealous of, namely, ascattering abroad upon the face of the earth; he having so spoken it, whose breath alone affords a faire wind: hoyst then they must their Sailes, and bidding adieu to the plain in the land of Shenar, seeke out some new habitation. Travellers they were of yore, and yet still must journey. Each one in as different a course, as of a divers language. The sonnes of Shem their way, the sonnes of Japhet, theirs. Gomer and Ma-gog, and Adai and Javan, with whom I purpose one furlong to keepe company, leaving the rest on one side or other, or behinde, looking only to my proposed scope. <sup>a</sup> Ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰαυάνης Ἰωνία καὶ πάντες Ἕλληνας γέγονασιν. From Javan came Ionia and all the Greekes. And in Scripture we have Javan put for Greece; in Daniel twice, <sup>b</sup> And when I am gone forth, loe the Prince of Grecia shall come. And again, <sup>c</sup> He shall stirre up all against the Realme of Grecia. Where although the old translation renders it not Javan, yet it is so found in the original. He then comming into the Country called afterwards Attica, left unto it his owne name, whence it was termed Ionia and Ias. ἢ γὰρ Ἀθηναίων τε καὶ Ἰωνίων καὶ Ἰαῶν ἐβλήθη. For Attica was anciently called Ionia and Ias. In which words we still retaine some reliques of the radix, notwithstanding the small difference of the termination. But if we please to view after what title the sonnes of Javan were stiled Iaones wee shall come neerer home. Strabo in the above quoted place, Οὗ τῆς πε-ντησὶ ὅταν εἴη - Ἐνθάδε Βοιωτῶν καὶ Ἰαόνων - τῶν Ἀθηναίων λέγει. Homer when he saies, There the Bœotians and Iaones speaks of the Athenians. The *Scholias*t of Æschylus on these words, <sup>c</sup> Ἰαῶν: οὗ γὰρ οὐκ εἶχε πέρτερον θείων

Ἰαῶν ἢ ὅτι Ἰαῶνες ἐστὶν Ἀθηναίων λέγοντες ἐκ πρῶτον Ἰαῶν Βασιλεύοντων αὐτῶν. It is to be understood, quoth he, that the Athenians are termed Iaones, from one Iaon (he means Javan) that was their King. Neither is it strange that the van or υφιλόν is left out; for though it be not written, yet perswaded I am that it was as much pronounced, as other au Diphthongs were. For the antique Latines and the Greeks spake it as broad a, as if it had been thesaros not thesauros. St. Walter Raleigh is of opinion that Asia the lesse had people before Greece had any, and that Javan did not fly from Babylonia into Greece, but tooke Asia the lesse in his passage, and from thence past over the nearest way, leaving his owne name to some maritime Province on that side as he did to that part so called. In which, although the authority of so worthy and judicious a man might move much, yet it shall be sufficient for me, only to goe so far, as antiquity will will beare me out. <sup>a</sup> Thucydides reports that it is manifest, <sup>a Lib. 1. p. 1.</sup> that all Greece was not βελούτος διεκδοθήν, firmly inhabited, but that there were continuall pilgrimages, or removings of the inhabitants, forsaking their former places, being driven out by a stronger and greater number. Wherefore when there was no safe traffique or commerce by sea or land, each manured his grounds for to have provent, alone to serve for present necessity, desiring no more then from hand to mouth; it being uncertain, how soone they might be compelled to get them thence. Whereupon they did more willingly change their seats; not taking grievous that sharp charge, Veteres migrato coloni: Be gone you ancient Boores. But the more fertill soyle had hard bickrings. Thessalic, Bœotia, and a great part of Peloponnesus, except Arcadia, was often invaded, and the old Lords expelled. Τῶν γὰρ Ἀθηναίων ἐν τῆς ἐπιπλεῖστον δια τὸ λεπτότερον <sup>Tunc d.</sup> ἀσυστάσων ἕκαστων ἀνθρώπων ὄκνην οὐκ ἐπιπέδον. But Attica, by reason of the thinnesse or barrennesse of the ground, was alwaies inhabited by the same men (none it seems being willing to leave his better, for a worse) not affording suell to contention. Out of which peace sprung up so great a multitude, that Attica, even now swarming, and ἔχ' ἑαυτῆς ἕσσης, not able to contain and feed so many, is constrained to fend forth Colonies into Ionia, a region of Asia the lesse, which is reported by the Greeks to borrow denomination from Ion the son of Xuthus, or, as the Poets say, Apollo and Creusa, who in the words of Enripides is thought to be Ἐπίστροπος Ἀσίας δ' Ἰωνίας, the maker or founder of Asia. The mother Ionia (for so I please to say) kept not still her former name, for in processe of time shee owned Ἀἴλαια, from Ἀἴλαιον, as <sup>d</sup> Strabo sayes, or from Ἀἴλαιος, according to <sup>e</sup> Pausanias, who was the first King thereof, by <sup>f</sup> Tzetzes on Lycophron called Ἀἴλαιος. But <sup>g</sup> Dion Chrysostom brings a more naturall reason then this, why it was Ἀἴλαια, Ἀἴλα signifies a shore, both in the Greeke and * Latine speech. Now because all of it within a little was washed with the sea, and <sup>h</sup> ἀλιπερές, it might challenge unto it self Ἀἴλαια. <sup>Di.</sup> ἠεὶ γὰρ τὴν ἑλπίδα πᾶσι τοῖς ἑσθλοῖς καὶ δαδ' ἀνθρώποις ἔδειξεν ὅτι τὸ ἱερόμα λα-βὴν, ὅτι ἀπὸ τῆς ἑλπίδος ἔστιν. Hence Aeschylus by the Enigmaticall Poet in his Cassandra is put for this country. Tzetzes. Because it is (Ἄετα) a cliffe, that is cast forth and lying in the sea. And Athens herselfe by Plantus is said Athenæ in æta, pro Athe-nis Atticis, as Palmerius hath noted. But this grew old after a season, and Cecrops having married the daughter of Ætens glories in his Cecropia (and Athens Cecropia, and Cecropis civitas, and after that Cranae from Cranaus the king that succeeded him.) This Cranaus among other of his daughters had one Atthis, from whom also was derived Atthis and Attica, next Posidonia and Minerva, from Neptune and Pallas. In this region stood Athens Queen of Greece, so called, from that victory which Minerva got over Neptune, when Ce-crops moved with a prodigie of a sudden shooting up of an Olive, and bubling forth of a salt spring in the Acropolis, consulted the Oracle of Apollo, who taught them that the one did signifie Neptune, the other Minerva, taking therefore the men into suffrages for Neptune, and the women for Minerva, who had most voices should carry it. The females being more the Goddesse bore away the bell. Lo here a witty Divell to bring in emælus Dei, Gods of his owne making, to infold the superstitious in an ignorant zeale. However let us leave the shadow of poeticall fictions, and take the true draught out of Mythologic. Plutarch is of opinion that the ancient kings striving to draw away their subiects from seafaring negotiations, and a desire to live by sayling, untill tillage and manuring of ground, gave occasion of the speech that Neptune and Minerva did altercate about the citie. Ἐκείνοι δὲ. &c. Neptune is put for the Sea and busineses thereof, Minerva for Arts and ingenuous kinde of life, nay sayes Ovid in his Kalender, Mille Dea est operum, she is Goddesse of a thousand trades. Others say that the City was consecrated to her by Amphillyon, & nomen civitati Athenas dedit. Justinus. Others in the time of Erethheus, among which is Herodotus, will have this name Beholding this Citie hath been to Egypt for other kings; to wit, <sup>b</sup> Cecrops and Menestheus, for his father Petes was an Egyptian. In the time of Diodorus Siculus and before him was it a received opinion that Athens was peopled by the Egyptians, Sais in that tongue answering to Athene in Greek, as Tzetzes out of Carax. Nay that they should be of the inhabitants of Sais, they argue from this. Because that the Saitæ and Athenians have divers customes alike. Witnesse Diodorus Siculus. But it pleases not me. I conjecture that first it was called Athens, when the people began more seriously to addict themselves to civill government, and study of good literature; knowledge and art being ascribed to Minerva. For if we beleve some they tell us, that now it is Salenos or Selines. To whom I accord not. Because that I have read Selines for Megara called Nisæa, which is not many miles from Athens. Furthermore in discourse with a native of Peloponnesus, who lived many years in that City, I had no other appellation from him then Ateone, which others write Satina corrupted as Portus and Meursius truly thinke for his Ἀθηνῶν. Upon the toppe of this Turret stand the fashions of Halfe-Moones most rarely gilded, after the manner of the Ismaelites, who have the Moone in no small honour, as my much honoured Mr. <sup>c</sup> Selden hath observed. Of which Lunulets thus speaks Favolius,

Whose tops with gilded Moons aspiring high, Doe knock the Clouds the pilgrims of the skie: Neither may it passe obscurely which I have taken up being let fall from the mouth of an eye witnesse; namely that on the side of this hill, on which the Acropolis is built, growes a certaine kinde of herbe, that farre off, in the night season, gives a most shining and glittering light, to which when a man shall approach, he shall discerne nothing but the herbe it self. Of which matter I seriously wish that I could testifie the truth. It was delivered to me, bona fide, with good credit. The walls that environ this, are none now, saies Favolius, but in former time it hath beene well fenced; some part thereof erected by those two Tuscan brothers, who leaving their country, lived here under the Acropolis, called πελαργίς, Pelargi, Storkes, δια τὴν πλάνην, for their wandering. <sup>a</sup> Strabo, <sup>b</sup> Plinie sayes their names were Euryalus and Hyperbius. The two that first built houses of bricke at Athens, when formerly they had caves for dwelling places. But by the authority of Pausanias, though the Printers and Scribes have done both that Author, and the persons wrong, in putting a false name upon one of them, I will doe them none. Read then Laterarias domus constituerunt primi Agrolas & Hyperbius fratres Athenis, &c. <sup>c</sup> Pausanias. ἑασί γὰρ Ἀρχέλαον κ' Ὑπερβίον. From these was that part which they edified called Pelargicum. Aristophanes in Avibus.

By which counsell the Athenians were entangled with that neighbour warre against the Lacedemonians, in which they found not vacancy for an audit.

By the way it shall be fit to acquaint you with thus much, that it was not permitted to a dog to enter into the Acropolis, as <sup>a</sup> Plutarch, διὰ τὸ ἀκοιλῆσαι καὶ δυσώδεις it may be, for his heat in venerie and ill savour. Goats likewise sayes <sup>b</sup> Varro, came not thither, unlesse for a necessary sacrifice once, lest they should hurt the Olive which is said first to have sprung up there. The circuit of this Acropolis is said to be threescore stadia. Now a Stadium is about some * six hundred and twenty five feet, eight of which make a mile, it being the custome of the ancient Greekes, to measure the length or distance of grounds, or Cities, by the στάδια. The first City then is contained in seven miles and an halfe. But to this were added more houses able to make a City of themselves. And so indeed were they distinguished by ἡ ἄνω & ἡ κάτω πόλις, The upper and the lower City. <sup>c</sup> Plutarch, ἢ καὶ τὴν κατὰ πλάτος ἑκατάσταντες, πῶς ἄνω πόλιν διαφυλάξαε. Note here moreover, in the reading of your Greeke Authors, that when you meet with τὸ ἄνω in the description of a country, you presently must conceive the higher part, if it be τὸ κάτω, Thucydidēs. <sup>d</sup> Ἐφερόν τε καὶ ἀλλήλους τε καὶ ἢ ἄλλων ὄσοι ὄντες ἔδωκα ἑκατάσταντες κατὰ πλάτος. And they prayed upon each other, and among the rest who were not addicted to the sea, yet lived below, understand neare the sea, Schol. κάτω. ἢ τοὶ ἐγγυὲς τῆς θαλάσσης. The τὸ ἄνω then, and τὸ κάτω knit together made but one joynt corporation; both, as it were uniting Piræum unto themselves, tooke up, as <sup>e</sup> Dion Chrysostom writes, two hundred stadia, which is about five and twenty miles. Upon which place, Morellus produces a *Scholias*t testifying that the walls were μυλίων ἑκατάσταντες ἑν, fifteene miles save one furlong. Where I wonder that the learned man had not estsoone perceived the number to have beene corrupt, and written κα for ἑκατάσταντες twenty five for fifteene. For so it ought to be. Neither is it strange that it had so large bounds. For consider that from Piræum to Athens were reckoned five miles, as you may see in <sup>f</sup> Plinie, from Athens to Phalerum, and so to the other side of Piræum four miles obtrude to us, that Pausanias teaches, that the <sup>c</sup> wall called Phalericus is but twenty stadia or two mile and an halfe.

When indeed he meant nothing lesse. For speaking of salt springs, which he calls θαλάσσιαι κώματα, he seems to involve a reason drawne from the nearnesse of the sea. For when he writes of this brackish well, Among the Athenians, the sea which comes up neere Phalerus is distant from the City but twenty stadia at the most, quoth he. Where Amaseus hath thus strangely doted. Athens à Phalero absunt stadia haud amplius xx. And that this was the meaning of the Author, proves that which followes. He might have likewise considered that οὐκ ἔστι with a Dative case signifies not onely juxta and prope as I have translated it; but supra sometimes, which will now serve better. And Meursius indeed blames the number; but sees not into the words. Now it is not needlesse

These are called δι μέτε τείχη by <sup>b</sup> Dion Chrysostom, because Athens being at one end, and Piræum at the other, these were drawn forth between. And when writers speak of Νόπον διὰ μέτε τείχη ⊙, it may be conjectured that it is for distinction of that Νόπον τείχη ⊙ in the Acropolis which Cimon built, <sup>c</sup> witness Pausanias. Τὸν Πειραιᾶ περιεμάζεν.

Which his <sup>e</sup> Scholiast affirms. Τὸν γὰρ Πειραιᾶ Θμιστοκλῆς περιεμάζεν τῷ πόλει. For Themistocles added Piræum to the City. We read in <sup>f</sup> Probus that he was the only agent in walling the City, and that he so hastned the accomplishing, that they were faine to be as it were sacrilegious, and make use of materials formerly consecrated to the edifying of Temples and Monuments of the dead. But <sup>g</sup> Plutarch gainsaies this, and that he did only τὴν πόλιν ἐξάπτειν τὸ περιεμάζεν, ἢ τὴν γῆν τῆς θαλάσσης, conjoyne the City and Piræum, and put the land to take acquaintance with the sea. It seemes somewhat forward before. However, so fennie was the ground it was founded upon, that the worke soone came to great reparation, which <sup>h</sup> Cimon the sonne of Miltiades undertook. For with stones of an huge weight and lime he made the earth so firm that it could not give. Nay he was so liberall, that he did out of his own expences so great favours, to a people that some years after gratified him with exile. Neither did he only mend the breaches; but in after time <sup>i</sup> finished the whole worke, so that he may truly be said to be the founder of them. Let us now come to the Gates of the City. * <sup>j</sup> Meursius hath observed tenne, but I feare they will scarce suffice to such a vast City. Take then these. Dipylon or Tbriaia, the fairest of all, velut in ore urbis posita, placed as it were in the front of the City, saies, Livie, major aliquanto patentior q̄ quam cetera est, greater somewhat and wider then the rest. Hence I suppose named Dipylon as if it were as big as two gates. Παι, αἰχ. Πι-

We read of this in <sup>c</sup> Theophrastus's Characters but to my great admiration, that the Eagle-fighted Cassanbon had not espied a fault. For though it be true that there were such gates at Athens as Isegi, yet is there any that ever read  $\chi\tau\iota\tau\epsilon\varsigma\ \tau\epsilon\varsigma\ \pi\acute{\upsilon}\lambda\alpha\varsigma\ \epsilon\zeta\epsilon\tau\epsilon\lambda\omega\chi\theta\epsilon\upsilon\ \nu\epsilon\alpha\tau\epsilon\varsigma$ , the dead to have been carried out to buriall through the Sacred gate? It makes not any thing that it was spoken to a stupid fellow, for they spake not as our vulgar doe, such as, When Christmas comes out of Wales, write then Heias. Heia are the gates at which they went forth with their corps at the solemnizations of their obsequies, the reason of which shall be spoken hereafter. <sup>d</sup> Demosthenes, Αἰγίως πύλαι. from Collatia, a Burge not farre off. And happily it is so here, as also in Διομένη Diomœa; for Diomus is a people of Athens not any great matter distant from the City. Θρακία Thracia. These are all that ever I met with named: others there are obscurely pointed at by Pausanias, as that neare the Gallery which from its various draughts they call Pacile, where is the effigies of Mercurie Agoraus in brasse. And others about the beginning of his Attica, of which I had better hold my peace then speake as good as nothing. Thus have we found twelve gates; which being opened, enter; sucke that sweet aire, whose excellent purity brought forth such acute wits<sup>b</sup> and prepared with a most happy bounty understanding judgements for contemplation. Whence Euripides may well straine to this note, that Venus sitting neare, and adorning herselfe, sends forth continually Cupids of learning, παιτις ἀρετῆς ἕνωσός. Well may he bleste that clime stiling it, ἡλαμπρῶτα τῶν ἀθίρα, which hath bene the Mother of the Muses (by the leave of Mnemosyne) or at least the Nurle to them, for there are they said to have travelled with Harmonia; as if there were no such melodious content, as in the Sciences. Not unworthily hath Sephacles bene lavish in expressions. g Famous, h The most renowned, i Happy, k Sacred Athens. Pindarus. l Wonderfull. m Much spoken of. n Neat, &c. To the making up of her delight comes to all the river Cephisus, which is able to beare vessels of a good burthen, as I have been informed, but the Turkes fearing lest it might be advantagious to an enemy that might invade them, have cut it into many and sundry little streams dāmming up with an innumerable quantity of stones the mouth of the river for a mile in length. Thinking they have sufficiently prevented, which they did but suppose could happen.

THE Athenians by <sup>a</sup> Dicaearchus are divided into two sorts, Ἀθηναῖοι, Atticos, and Ἀθωαῖοι. Of which though there were no difference in latter times, yet certainly of old there was. Inſomuch as one of the puniſhments, which the Athenians are ſaid to inflict upon their women ( for the appeaſing of Neptune, bringing in an inundation upon their fields to their great damage, in anger conceived for loſſe of the Title of the City) was this, <sup>b</sup> That none ſhould after call them Ἀθωαῖα, Athenians, but Ἀθηναῖα, Atticas. A revenge I ſuppoſe opprobrious enough. For thus writes my Author. Οἱ κερὶ πείρορρι ἢ ἀθωαῖς, ὑπευλοῖ, συκοφαντοῖς, καταπρηπῶ τ' ἑταικῶν βίον. Curious bablers, Deceitfull, Calumniators, Observers of the lives of ſtrangers, Πείρορρι ταῖς λαλιαῖς. A ſufficient witneſſe of this is <sup>c</sup> S<sup>r</sup> Lake, that ſaies, they did regard nothing more then to heare and ſpeake noveltie. To which end they often met in Barbers ſhops, where all the news that was going in thoſe daies, was curreant. Hence ſay we, verba in tonſtrinis preculcata: and in Greek ἐπὶ τοῖς κερταίοις λόγῳ, <sup>d</sup> Ariſtophanes.

Καὶ τοὶ λόγῳ γ' ὡς, τὴν τ' Ἡγελαῖα, πολὺς Ἐπὶ πῶσι κερταίοισι κερταίων Ὡς ἔξαπῆμις ἀπὸρ γελλῶν) πλάσσειθ.

They that ſate in the Barbers ſhops did talke much that he was ſuddenly growne rich. The Scholiaſt ſeemes to take the meaning as if the Comædian had quipped them for reſorting to Barbers, and neglecting Barber Chirurgions of better credit. But I ſee no reaſon. They met in both to prattle. <sup>e</sup> Ælian Καθεζομενος ἐν ἱατρείῳ, λογιόδοξος, ἢ κακῶς ἀπορθεῖν ἐκ παρτοῦ ἔπει*δυσλῶντας*. Sitting in a Chirurgions shop, scandalous, and thir-stic to speake ill by all meanes. Ἰταλιανῶν. men Italianated, who can smile, even when they cut your throat. Such as Theophrastus hath in his Characters drawn out, who can be affable to their enemies, and disguise their hatred in commendation, while they privily lay their snares; that salute with mortall embracements, and claspe you in those armes, which they meane to embrew in your dearest blood. In tumme, faire without, but rotten within, like a wound which is healed above and seemes sound, but putrifies under the skin. And so much the word doth import. Συκοφῶν τῶνδεῖς. Given to false accusations. The Scholiast of Aristophanes writes, that it being forbidden to carry figges out of Athens, and some neverthelesse the decree being absolute against it, presuming so to doe, they set rogues in the gates that did appeach them (as Plutarch likewise.) Hence came this word to be used for any cratty knave that gets his living by promoting, ἀπὸ συ-κοφῶντιαι ζῶν. One that meddles in every mans affairs, and therefore Aristophanes hath fitly brought one upon the scene terming himselfe an Overseer both of private and pub-like matters. If then such a person had espied any tripping, and gotten him upon the hip, he would as sure have fetched him over for his coyn, as any Summoner doth a person delinquent towards the flesh, or any Lawyer a credulous client, & having well plumed him, afterwards give him a dimissorie.

 Ἐκείνοι (Sycophants) ὡς γὰρ παρ' ὧν χεῖματα λαμβάνοιεν, ζῶν ἕστω.
Xenophon. Such were many in Athens, insomuch that Aristotle being asked what Athens was, answered, καλὴ καὶ ἄσπις. All beautifull, ἀλλ' ὁππότερ' ὄνειρος ἴσθαι δοκεῖ σὺ κεν δ' ἴσθαι σὺν αὐτῷ, in a verse of Homer in the description of Alcinous his garden, but pears grew ripe after peares, and figs after figs, meaning a continuall succession of Sycophants. This made Isocrates the Oratour to compare the City to a Cortezan, with whom few there were but would have to doe, yet none dare take to wife, affirming it to be the best place to sojourn in, but the worst to inhabit:

By reason of their Sycophants and trecheries of nimble-tongued Oratours. Πάραπρητοι τῆς Ξενικῶν βίωι. I was once halfe in an opinion that these words were to have been put to the former thus, συκοφαντώδεις παράπρητοι τῆς Ξενικῶν βίωι. And I thinke the sense will runne well, Malitious observers of the lives of strangers. The Athenians were φιλόξενοι and held hospitality sacred, and I doubt not but they had that Law, That forrainers should receive no wrong, (ἴνα μη ἀδικῶν.) <sup>a</sup> Socrates in Xenophon. Now he discommends the Ἀπικοί as ready to trouble and vex strangers in law, duly marking and bearing an eye unto them to take them at an advantage; As for the Athenienses they were μεγαλόψυχοι ἀπλοῖσι τοῖς ἕτοις, φιλίας γήσιοι φύλακες, Brave spirited, single dealing, and faithfull friends. But as the words were at length confounded, so did their manners degenerate, growing into ἀνωμαλίαν τῆς φύσεως, an Irregularity of nature. as <sup>b</sup> Polybius. No μεγαλόψυχα afterwards, but hautinesse of spirit, magnanimity now fallen. And when <sup>c</sup> Livy sayes ex vetere fortuna nihil prater animos servare, hee meanes, they had nothing left but those proud spirits, which their ancient flourishing fortune had puffed up. No ἀπλοτης, or simplicity, <sup>d</sup> no lambe like innocency, or mildnesse; but as <sup>e</sup> Plutarch speaks, people rashly angry, soon pitifull, rather inclined sharply to take opinion, then quietly to be informed. And as they are ready to helpe base and object peasants, so friendly doe they entertaine childish and ridiculous toys, rejoycing in their own praises, and nothing moved with scurrility. Fearfull and terrible even to their governours, humane towards their enemies. Not unfitly then <sup>f</sup> Valerius Maximus, Quantum ergo reprehensionem merentur, &c. How deserve they to be blamed, who though they had just laws, yet had most wicked disposition, and chose rather to take their owne courses, then put in practise their statutes? As for their impudence, so great was it, that to expresse a countenance void of shame, the Comedian hath put Ἀπικὸν βλέπειν, An Athenian look, in <sup>g</sup> Nubibus, φιλίας γήσιοι φύλακες, So accounted in the time of <sup>h</sup> Paterculus,

Here were at first but two kindes of people in Athens, a two orders quibus inter gradus dignitatis fortunæq; aliquid interlucebat, in which there was difference of dignity & fortune: such as at this day are in France either Peers or Peasants, or as in Venice Particians and Plebeians. And although Pollux calls them τρία γένη, three sorts, yet I make but two, because the γεωμόροι were not any way more gentile for blood, surpassing for riches, or happy for life. But because he hath so set them, take them thus, as he speakes: <sup>b</sup> τρία γ' ἔστι πάλαι.
Εὐπατρίδαι, Γεωμόροι, Δημιουργοί. Ευπατρίδαι, Eupatriide, were such as were descended from the loyns of those Heroes famous in the Greek history, whose families were ever renowned, and posterity propagated to many generations; such as Praxiergide, Eteobutade, Alcæonide, Cynide, Ceryces, &c. whom we may tearme Nobles, or men of good birth. Γεωμόροι, Geomori; may not seeme unlike our Ycomen, who had lands of their own, and sustained themselves with the fruit and commodity of their possessions. Δημιουργοί, Demiurgi, were men of some handi-craft, Tradesmen, such as Tentmakers, Shoema-kers, Carpenters, Masons, and the like. But Solon made another division. For when the Diacrii, which were those that lived in the upper part of the City, διὰ τῆς ἀσῆς, saies Diogenes Laertius; and the Pediai which likewise are πεδίαι, such as lived in the middle of the City, or the plain. And the Paralii who lived neare the sea, were at contention about government. The Diacrii leaning to a Democratic, as <sup>d</sup> Plusarch writes, the Pediai to an Oligarchie, and the Paralii between both, and had chosen Solon to arbitrate and determine the matter

matter; he made these foure rankes. Πεντακοσιμεδιμνος, Ἴππεις, Ζεγγίται, Θῆται, Pentacosimedimnos. Equites. Zeugitæ. Thetæ. Pentacosimedimni were those who ἐν ἐνεργῆ ὀμῆ καὶ ὑπερῆ, could make five hundred measures in wet, and drie commodities alike. What Possardus then brings out of Varro concerning modium, hath no place here, for he supposes that Pentacosimedimnus was he that had as much ground as fifty Medimni could suffice to sow, but here I will confute him with a wet finger, ἐν ὑπερῆ. For he seems to sow upon the waters. This is he whom the Elzevirii printed at Leyden, anno 1635. under the name of Postellus who was sometime a Professor of Tongues in France, and author of the Treatise de Magistratibus Atheniensium. Equites were such as were of ability to keep an horse, or had the quantity of three hundred measures in dry, & as many in wet; called likewise Ἴππιδæ τελευτήτες. Zeugitæ, were such as could of wet and dry in all make but three hundred. Any of these three could beare office in the Commonwealth. A fourth ranke which he called Ἰππῆται, Thetæ, a name from servility, which had no power in the rule of the weale publique. But it had not beene amisse if I had shewn how the Ægyptians had divided their people into three classes as the Athenians did, as I have spoken above. For the first degree or Enpatride addicted to learning and study, who were had in greater honour, answer to the Ægyptian Priests. Nay those great houses in Athens had Priesthood by succession, as Eumolpida, Ceryces, Cynide. For out of the stock were chosen Priests, hence ἱερὸς οὐνοῦ ἐκ γένους in Demosthenes. The Geomori who had lands assigned to them for the maintenance of the war, are not dislike them in Egypt who hold possessions on these tearmes, namely to provide souldiers when need shall require to fight. The Demiurgi relemble those Plebeians who skiltfull in some art, did set out their labour to daily hire: as Diodorus Siculus can testifie.

Tribulum Κοινωνία Φυλακῆ δ' ἑπτά, φερεϊορῆ.

IN Athens there were but foure Tribes under the rule of Cecrops. Cecropis, Autoethon, Altea, Paralia; which had other names put to them, Cranaïs, Arthús, Mesogæa, Diacris.
I suppose from the parts of Attica, it lying partly neare the sea, thence Altea partly hilly, thence Diacris, partly Mediterranean, thence Mesogæa, the other name from the King that was then; whether the King would honour the Tribe so much, or the Tribe glory in the name of the King, I know not. It is probable that it was an honour to their governour, for as Cecrops gave the first names, Cranaus the second, each assuming a title to himselfe, Eriethonius called them after the name of Jupiter, Pallas, Νεπτινε, Vulcan. Διός, Αθηνῶν, Ποσει-δωνῶν, Ἡρακλειῶν. But when Ion came to rule they were named after his foure sonnes, Geleontes, Ægicoreis, Argades, Hopletes, as <sup>a</sup> Herodotus and <sup>b</sup> Euripides; though Plintarch sayes nus, Leo, Erechthens that slew Immaradus the sonne of Eumolpus in the Eleusinian war, Egons, Oeneus, Acamas, Cecrops, Pandion. From these Ἰαποδωνίδης, Ἀρποχίς, Διαντίς, Δεσπιδίς, Οἰνίς, Ἀκαμαΐδης, Κεχροπίς, Πανδονίς To which they put two more, one called after Antigonus, the other after Demetrius his name, in gratuity to them for the favours received; which in processe of time they changed into Attalis, and Ptolemais, as Stephanus writes, διὰ τῆς ἐπαυρούων εὐεργητηθειῶν βασιλέων, having beene curteously entreated by the * Kings bearing that name. Which being so, let us take heed that Livie deceive us not, who at the time, when Attalus did succour the Athenians against Philip, saies they first thought of adding that Tribe to the tenne, in thanksgiving that the Rhodii rescued four fighting ships of the Athenians taken by the Macedonians, and sent them home, Tum primum mentio illata de tribu quam Attalida appellarent, ad decem veteres tribus addenda. Thus have we seene that there were twelve Tribes in all. Let us look back to the first institution. I suppose they were first ordained for the better administration of civill government. <sup>b</sup> Eusebius writes that they were divided in imitation of the year, the foure Tribes according to the four quarters; each Tribe into three Fraternities, which they call τριπύς or φρατρία answerable to the twelve Moneths, each φρατρία or τριπύς into thirty ἡμέραι or kindreds equalising the dayes. For so many only had the yeare of old. Witnesse the Riddle of <sup>c</sup> Cleobulus concerning the yeare,

Ἐἷς πατήρ, παῖδες δ' ὄντα δώδεκα· ἧς ἕκαστω Παῖδες τριήκοντα, διαώδιχα εἶδος ἐχέουσι.

One Father had twelve Sonnes, and each son thirty daughters, and every daughter black and white, meaning daies and nights. Over these were governours φυλοετασίαις, Kings of the Tribes, who sate upon controversies between party and party of their owne Tribes. Each Tertian also had his overseer called, Τετάρχης the Ruler of the Τρίστεις or Phratris. The word may seeme to signifie a Society, fellowship, or company.

company. It skills not whether you derive it from οαρία, as Eustath. or παρεά, as Suidas, or φρίαρ, as others, which is a Well, because they drew water from the same well. For the place being scanty of Springs where Athens was founded, there being but one well-spring in Athens, they were constrained to use φρίασι πιπιτοῖς, digged wells, as Plutarch. φριπτες are the men of that society, called by Tully, Curiales, of the same Ward, speaking of Cimon, who gave command that his servants should afford what they had if any Laciades should come into his Farme. In description of which thing Plutarch uses δημότης, which then we are not to interpret (Curialis, for this is as much as συγγενής, and συμφυλῆτης) but popularis. These at festivall daies in Athens met in a place called Phratrion, as Eustathius observes, & Ροδνκ (where they brought their children to be ingrossed in their books, as shall be hereafter spoken with the reasons thereof) φρατίζειν, Phratrizein from hence comes which is πῆς φρατρίαν ζωιέναι, to meet, for so Eustathius in another place, εἰς ταυτὸ ζωιέναι. As for the γένη or kindreds wee must not thinke that they were of one blood, but from that neare conjunction which they had each with other being admitted into this society. Γένε μὲν (every Γένος or kindred consisted of thirtie, whence they were named τριακίδες) ἢ πρεσβυχοτες, ἐκ τῶν σωῶνδε ἔτα φρονιμοὺς δόμοι. Not of affinity so called, but for their Synod; which the Grammarians call συσημα κοινωρικόν: a Communicative familiarity, κοι νία being a participating in one thing, or having an equall share in the same priviledges. Great was their care of each other; great was their mutuall love; which that it might continue, Solon their Law-giver ordained certaine feasts to be provided, wherein they should kindly entertaine each other. δῆπνα φυλετικά, and φρατεικά. Athenaus. Τῶν δὲ νῦν δῆπνων πρῶτον ἴες εἰ νομοθέτῳ τὰ τε φυλετικά δῆπνα καὶ τὰ δημοτικά προσέταξαν ἐπὶ τῶν διαύσι καὶ τὰ φρατεικά. &c. Of feasts celebrated at this day the Law-makers have appointed Phyletica for Tribes, Demoisica for the people or popular, moreover

The Athenians being as yet not gathered into Corporations, when they sung sacred hymnes to Apollo Nomius, that is, the President of the shepherds and neighbours, about the villages, houses and crosse waies of Attica, altars being built in honour of the celebrity, sprung up a Comædie ὑπὸ τῶν κωμῶντων καὶ ἀδῶν from revelling and singing. Others will have it derived from an ancient custome they had, when any were injured among them, for the party wronged to come to the street where the offender lived, and in the night time to cry aloud,

But the Anonymus in a preface to Aristophanes saies, μὴ κώμας καλεῖται ἕως Ἀθηνάων, ἀλλὰ δῆμος, that they were not called κώμας or villages by the Athenians, but δῆμος which they translate

If so be we will have δῆμος to be Townes, Sunium as well as Piræus is a Towne. These were formerly kingdoms as <sup>b</sup> Pausanias testifies. Τῆραπῶτα δὲ δῆμοι, τ' ἐν τοῖς δῆμοῖς φάσαι πολεῖς, ὡς ἔχ' ἑὸν ἀρχῆς ἐβασίλευον τὸ Κέκροπος. Moreover I have written, that some of the Townes were governed by a King before the reigne of Cecrops. And no marvell, for some of them farre surpassed other Cities, as Aristides affirmeth. These were most peculiar to the Athenians, anciently called νεοκλαεοι, as <sup>c</sup> Aristoph. Schol. or Ναυκλαεοι, as <sup>d</sup> Pollux, twelve belonging to every Tribe. But Clisthenes changed them into δῆμος, as out of Aristotle the Schol. of Aristoph. The number of them is, as <sup>e</sup> Eustathius out of Strabo, and <sup>f</sup> Casaubon, an hundred seventy foure. Some whereof having the same name are distinguished according to their situations καὶ δὴ μὲν ἄνω καὶ ἑσπέρθεν, as we may say the upper and the lower Wakefield, &c. All of them are divided into Greater and Lesser. The <sup>h</sup> μικροί or lesse are these. Alimusii, Zoster, Prospaltii, Anagyraſii, Cephale, Prasici, Lampreis, Phlyeis, Myrrinusii, Ashmoneis, Acharna, Marathon, Brannon, Rhamnus. ## CAP. VII.

Τυραννίς. Ολιγαρχία Δημοκρατία. Atheniensium status mutatio.
 Ἰεῖδος Σωτη, αὐ Μήρας. Δ 85.

THE Ancients had but three sorts of government. Tyrannis, Democratia, Oligarchia as <sup>2</sup> Æschines, which Polybius calls βασιλείαν, αἰετοκρατίαν, δημοκρατίαν. where although the one names it a Tyrannis or Tyranny, the other βασιλεία the rule of a King, yet must we understand the same. For in old time all Kings were called Tyrants, as Servius on Virgil hath observed. A word taken up by the Grecians about the time of Archilochus, which neither Homer, nor Hesiod knew; and therefore are the Poets noted, as, Ἴδιον πεποιθότες, for calling the Kings, or βασιλεῖς before the Trojan wars, Tyrants or Tyrannos. βασιλεία or a Kingdome, is where obeisance is free, yielded rather out of a good advice, then for feare or might. Αἰετοκρατία an Aristocratie, when most wise and just men are fitly chosen to sit at the Helme of the Weale publike. Δημοκρατία a Democratic, when the Laws and customs of the County in matters belonging both to Gods and men are truly observed, and that rules the rolt, which shall be approved of by the greater part, πὶ δόξαν τοῖς πλείοσι, saies Polybius; as that may be said at a banquet to please all, which doth relish well with the most. But the grave Historian hath observed changes in such government, as they use to be, inclining to the worst, Monarchies being turned in to Tyrannies; as when the people are led away by the persuasions of some pleasing <sup>b</sup> popular man, and are as it were, willingly constrained to take the yoke that his usurping authority shall lay on them, a Tyrant indeed said, Viconsecutus, who gets it by violence, <sup>d</sup> Omnes autem & habentur & dicuntur Tyranni, qui potestate sunt perpetua in civitate, que libertate tertate usa est. But all are accounted and called Tyrants, who have perpetuall authority in that City, which formerly hath enjoyed liberty. The deprivation of which causing murdering and rebellion, brings forth an Aristocratie, or government of the best men, such as are well brought up, and exercised in vertue. The end of an Aristocratie being, as Aristotle hath it, Virtue, which of no long continuance doth soon degenerate, <sup>b</sup> εἰς δὲ γὰρ χίαν τραπεσίαν καὶ οὐσίαν, naturally inclining to an Oligarchie, or rule of few. These few being chosen according to their riches. And because that many in a state cannot be wealthy, therefore the number of them cannot be great. These are great Lords and little Kings, whose power swaies all, and not the Laws; who unjustly favour those that are partially theirs, and oppresse them that would defend their liberty against them. All things being administred <sup>c</sup> πρὸς ὑποκρίσει καὶ ἐπιχειρήσει, by their presidents. Such dominion is taken away by the people set on a rage, and not bearing <sup>d</sup> τὸς καὶ τὸς ἐπιβλάται τῶν ἀρχόντων, the injuries of their rulers. Hence comes in a Democratie, which Sophocles calls ἐπὶ τῶν πλείων λόγον, the power of a multitude, whose end is freedom, when all can equally partake of the same priviledges and immunities, who are true citizens; whence Terence titles it equam libertatem, for which the Greek Orators have properly used the word παλιτεια as <sup>e</sup> Vlpian observeth. But the vulgar for the most part strangely insolent, prone to wrong, and ready to trespass against the Lawes, bring in by a miserable proceeding, the worst kinde of government an Ochlocratie, the rule of Rascality. All these in their times did Athens seele, for they were governed by Kings foure hundred eightie seven years: the last of which was Codrus, who in a fight between the Dorianses and Athenians offered himselfe willingly to be slaine, it being foretold by the Oracle of Apollo that the Dorianses should be conquerours unlesse the Athenian King were killed; he therefore clothing himselfe famulari veste ne possit agnosci, saies <sup>f</sup> Cicero, with a servants habit lest he should be known, put himself among the enemies, by one of which in a brawle he was murdered. After whom none enjoyed the name of King; quod memoria nominis ejus tributum est, which was done in memory to his name. For after that, Archontes or Judges ruled; in the Title ἀρχοντες, Archontes, but in power Kings, whose authority was for tearme of life. These continued three hundred and fifteen yeares. These being ended, it pleased the State to choose a man, whose office should continue but ten yeares; seven succeeded each other, and made up the number of seventy yeares; who, because they abused their power, were made but for one yeare, called therefore <sup>b</sup> annui Magistratus, yearly Magistrates. These continued Pisistratus, for a fained feare of the seditious, begged a guard of the people for his safety. For when the faction sprung up, of which I have spoken in the fourth Chapter, hee cutting himselfe with lashes, and the Mules which drew his Chariot, went into the place of meeting, ἀγορῆ, and beseeching the people to afford him some defence against their violence, who did (but did not) assault him, procured a company of chosen Citizens who armed with clubs, not weapons, possessed the Castle, and so Tyranny came in, which Pisistratus enjoyed <sup>c</sup> thirtie yeares, and deceased, leaving behinde him two sons, Hipparchus, and Hippias, whom Heraclides calls Thestalus. Hipparchus was slaine by Aristogiton, after whose death the Athenians lived under a tyranny <sup>d</sup> foure yeares, from which they were delivered by the helpe of the Lacedamonians, the offspring of Alcæon corrupting the Oracle, to the end that whentoever they came for counsell he should wish them to free the Athenians of that servitude. The Democratie came in eight hundred sixtie eight yeares after Cecrops, established by Solon, who excluded the fifth rank of plebeitie from office or honour by a law, afterwards abrogated by Aristides. After this Pericles brought in an Ochlocratie by weakning the power of the Areopagites. Then after the overthrow in Sicily the Τετρακόσιοι, or foure hundred tooke upon them state, deceiving the people, as <sup>a</sup> Aristotle and <sup>b</sup> Thucydides affirme. For persuading them that they should reconcile Tissaphernes and Alcibiades unto themselves by that meanes, and that the Persian Monarch would afford supply for the war, they most willingly condescended to this motion in the one and twenty year of the Peloponnesian warre. These Princes were called πεντακισχίλιοι, τετρακόσιοι ὄντες, five thousand, though not exceeding foure hundred. The reason is, because they boasted that none should be rewarded, but who bare arms; nor any admitted to publique power but five thousand, such as with person and estate could be beneficiall to the Republique. Their authority was granted by an <sup>d</sup> Act of the people, to which Theramenes was very forward, but after they were inducted none more ready to drive out; whereupon they termed him Κόθορον Cothurnum, from a kinde of start-up which did fit both feet. καὶ γὰρ ὁ Κόθορον ἑτάρα μάλιστα ἰδὸν τοὺς ποσσὶν ἀμφοτέρωθεν δοκεῖ. The word may sute with a Jack of both sides.

 These Τετρακόσιοι were constrained for feare of <sup>c</sup> Alcibades to resigne the right unto the people, and to goe into wilfull banishment. But when Lysander had overcome Athens (the Lacedemonians ever affecting an Oligarchie, as the Athenians a Democratie) he ordained these thirty to be chiefe: <sup>e</sup> Poly-some, stiled <sup>a</sup> κατεδρόμοι, which were nullified by a decree, as we shall speak hereafter) none was to suffer ἐν τῷ καταλόγῳ, who was registred in the list of three thousand. So cruell were they, that the people fled into <sup>b</sup> Phyle a castle in the Athenian borders; and making an head, under the conduct of Thrasylulus, at last shook off his yoke, and remained free untill the death of Alexander even fourescore yeares, whom Antipater succeeded, who in battle at the City Lamia gave the Athenians an overthrow, and gave them quarters on these termes that they should submit to a few Peeres, whose revenues amounted to two thousand Drachm'es at least, the chiefe of whom was Demetrius Phalerens, that they should likewise receive a garrison into Munychia for the asswaging of riots and uproares. But foure years after, Antipater dying, the City fell into the power of Cassander, of whom they often strove to acquit themselves. But in vain. For he brought them to such an exigencie, that they were glad to come to composition. And indeed he dealt fairely with them, giving them their Citie, Territories, Tributes, and all other things, so that they would be confederates to him, that none, whose revenewes come not to tenne mina or pounds, should undergoe any function in the Commonweale; and he should bee their overseer whom he would be pleased to nominate. The man appointed was Demetrius Phalereus, <sup>c</sup> who made the Citie to shine in her full lustre, intomuch that they erected in honour of him three hundred Statues. He wrote a Treatise of the Athenian Republique, which had not time devoured, would have given no small light to my poore endeavours. After he in trouble and vexation had spent fourteen years he was put out by Demetrius the sonne of Antigonus surnamed Poliorcetes, who restored the ancient customes to them againe. To him they ascribed such worship, as also to his father, that they changed the name of their Judge from Archon into <sup>d</sup> ἄρχων ἑσέας. the Tenne, whence the Senate consisted of six hundred, but five before, as <sup>a</sup> Stephanus, but when Cassander had overthrowne the sonne and father, such was the ingratitude and levity of the Athenians, that they forbade Demetrius to approach neare their City. After this Lacharis plaid the Tyrant, and was expelled by Demetrius, whom they utterly cast off, assuming againe the title of Archon. Demetrius dying Antigonus Gonatas succeeded, who in the nineteenth year of his reigne put in presidarie souldiers to the City, which tenne years after he tooke out. The Macedonians still kept some of the Athenians forces in this space. Demetrius Antigoni Gon. F & Antigonus Dofon, out of whose hands <sup>b</sup> Aratus the Sicyonian rescued the City, and made it stand by it selfe untill Philip, the last king of the Macedonian Monarchy except one, did somewhat shake it, as you may read in <sup>c</sup> Livie. But he was expelled by the Romans, who tooke the Athenians into league, with a maintaining of their ancient right. So they remained untill the war between Mithridates and the Romans. For by feare they were driven to receive <sup>d</sup> Archestratus, Mithridates his Generall, within their walls; against which Sylla laid siege, and captivated the City, whence proceeded <sup>e</sup> Alexis (Cory), a mercilesse slaughter, saies Appian, that the <sup>e</sup> streets did run with blood. But the Lawes were not much altered by this Conquerour; and therefore they lived in a neare resemblance of their former state; in favour with the Roman Emperours. Julius Caesar, Adrian, Antonius, Gabienus, in whose successours time Claudius the second of that name, this City was ransacked by the Gothes, who when they had heaped up innumerable companies of bookes to burne, were denoted by this reason, that the Greekes, spending their time in reading of them, might be made more unfit for war. Constantine the Great likewise had this City in high esteeme, taking to himselfe the Title of Στρατιωτῆς Πρωτου, as <sup>g</sup> Justin saies, which in the words of Nicephorus Gregorius is <sup>h</sup> το ὑπομονετικῶς γένους ἡρώδου whom simply af-wards they called the <sup>a</sup> Duke of Athens, in that Historians time. Emperours have taken them wives citizens of this place, and the <sup>b</sup> daughters of their Dukes have beene desired by that eminent ranke. And indeed no marvell. For they were potent. Rainerius Acciajolus is said to have taken the Citie from the Spaniards that inhabit Arragon, <sup>c</sup> Εὐβοῖα δὲ ἔχει ταύτην ὁ Ἰόνιος; who having no issue male of his wife, Eubote but an illegitimate named Antonius, by another woman, bequeathed by will Beotia and Thebes to him, but Athens to the <sup>d</sup> Venetians, from whom his sonne recovered it againe. Nerius succeeded him in the Dukedom who thrust out Chalcocondilas his father. After him came in Antonius Nerius brother to the former Nerius. Now about this time we must know that Mahomet the sonne of Amurat the second got Athens, <sup>d</sup> whose beauty and building he held in admiration; which when he had made his own, he continued the Title. For another Nerius from those above named dying, leaving one sonne an infant, his mother in the childs Title exercised Tyranny. The woman loved a Venetian Noble man (sonne to Petrus Palmerius, to whose government the Citie Nauplium was committed, he is called by Chalcocondilas Priamus) who came thither for merchandize. Him by discourse and flattery she inticed into her love, promising that she would take him to her husband, and give up the Princedome of Athens unto him. But upon condition, that he would divorce his owne wife. Whereupon the young man going to Venice slew his wife, swelling with ambition, and thirsty of honour. Which being done, he returnes to Athens, marries this woman, enjoys the government of the Citie; who being hated of the Athenians, and complained of at the Court, to avoid envy termed himselfe the Childes Tutor. And not long after taking the boy with him, went to the Court, where Francus Acciajolus waited, expecting to be promoted to the Dukedom. When the Emperour therefore understood the folly of the woman, he gave the title to him. Who being called,

Herodotus in Terpsichore is of opinion that the

And not without good testimony may I affirm that it seemes to be a fallity. For Orpheus is votion. Ἰσοκράτης τὸ πρῶτον θεὸς ἐπέλεσαν θεῖον ἑρωσκίαν, ὡς ὀρακλαῖος ἔπος ἔ-number they were, quoth he, but these only are reckoned, Jupiter. Bacchus. Hercules. Apollo. Mars. Pan. Diana. Isis or Ceres. Saïs or Minerva. Latona. as I have gathered, which all at once to have beene made knowne to the Greekes, and that by the Egyptians is too hard a taske for me to prove. The Athenians I am sure had twelve Gods in especiall honour, whose pictures they had drawne out in a Gallery in Ceramics; and had an Altar erected, called Βωμὸς ἑστὸς δώδεκα θεῶν, on which a little before the Sicilian war, a man dismembred himselfe with a stone, which was accounted prodigious. By these twelve would they swear in common discourse. Μὲν τὸν δώδεκα θεῶν. The heathens thinking that they did honour those Gods, by whom they sware, as I have elsewhere spoken. But they were not confined to so small a number as twelve. For how could it be, when they ran through the seven sorts of Idolatry? First worshipping the Sun, and punishing with death the neglect thereof; as you may read in Plutarch in the life of Pericles. Secondly, deifying the effects of God, as bread, &c. For Clemens Alexandrinus interprets Διὸς, Ceres, & στῆται, corne or food. Thirdly, the poetical Gods. Furies and revengers of wickednesse, as Alastores, Palamnei. Fourthly, the Passions, as Love, Pity. Injury likewise and Impudence, to whom Epimenides built an Altar at Athens. Fifthly, the accidents of growth and nourishment; hence Auxo and Tballo two deities, αὐξάνειν, to increase, and δαίνειν to flourish; to which may be put Clotho, Lachesis, and Atropos, the three fatall sisters, and Επιβουίαν, Necessity, taken sometime for death it selfe. Sixtly, the Theogonie or pedigree of their Gods, able to make up the summe of which Homer speaks. Τεῖς γὰρ μύηαι &c. Three thousand. Seventhly, an ignorance of the providence and bounty of God toward them, fained Hercules the repeller of evill, and Esculapius the God of Phylick. And if this serve not, I can adde an eighth way, namely hospitality and good entertainment of strange Gods. Ἀθιναῖοι δ' ἄπειρ' οἰεῖ τ' ἄλλα φιλοξενῶντες διατελοῖσι, ἕκαστος

ἡ δὲ τῶν Θεῶν. sates <sup>a</sup> Strabo. as the Athenians love forrainers, so forrain Gods. Οὐ γὰρ μόνον τῶν πρεσβυτάτων ἀρχαῖν Θεῶν, &c. <sup>b</sup> Aristides. For they serve not only the most ancient Deities, in a peculiar manner above all their followers, but have assumed adventitious ones; such as <sup>c</sup> Orbane, Conisalus, and Tychon. So prone were they to conceive superstition, that when <sup>d</sup> Paul preached Jesus and the resurrection of the dead; they forthwith deemed Anastasin, or resurrection to be a God. And lest they should omit any, they erected Altars to the unknowne Gods, of which <sup>e</sup> Pansanias. Neither may we doubt of it, the Scripture bearing witness. The cause of this they say to be a fearfull vision appearing to Philipides, sent Ambassador to the Lacedæmonians concerning aid against the Persians, and complaining that he (<sup>f</sup> Pan, from whom pannydy a spectrum) was neglected and other Gods worshipped; promising likewise his helpe, they therefore being victorious, and fearing the like event, built a Temple and Altar TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Another opinion is, that a plague being at Athens hot, and the people finding no helpe from the Gods they implored, surmising some other power to have sent the disease, whereupon they set up this Altar, on which was written ΘΕΟΙΣ Ἀσίας ἡ Εὐρώπης, ἡ Αἰθίως, Θεῶν Ἀγνώστων ἡ Ζείων. TO THE GODS OF ASIA, EUROPE, AND AFRICA, TO THE UNKNOWN AND STRANGE GOD. As Justin <sup>g</sup> Martyr and Oscumenius. Much may be said of their Tutelar Gods, both for their Cities and houses, much of their Heroes or Demigods. We will view them in order.

οὐκ ἐπὶ χερσίν &c. where is the salt? And yet it may be thought to be said of the community of the table ἢ ἔθω ἀπὸ δηλοῦ πεν μὴ κακουργεῖν τῷ ἐμοσι πρὸς ἐξέσιν, customs shewing that fellow commoners, and such as feed of the same table must not injure one another, to which the old saying may well a-expletum sit, Men must eat many bushels of salt together, before they can be perfect friends; meaning that friendship is not to be soone established. But I take salt, of the lustration, to which also they added fire, as you may see in Ἀριστοφάνης. Neither was this all, for they sacrificed moreover, calling Jupiter to witnesse, and using these words in the time of sacrifice; ὅς ἐστιν εὐχὴ ἐπὶ τῷ θεῷ, ἢ ἀπειράτω ξένους. Let my trespassse be against Jupiter Xenius, if I offend, contemne, or neglect strangers. And for the continuation of this even to their posterity they were wont to cut an huckle bone in two, the one party keeping one peece, the other party the other halfe, that when occasion or necessity should make either of them stand in need of other, ἢ ἐπιφέρειν ἢ ἠὲ πρὸς ἀπείραντι ἀναστῆναι τὴν ἑξήμιον, bringing with them their halfe huckle bone they might renew their hospitality. This they call σύμβολον Symbolum a token, which sometimes they would send to their acquaintance in others behalfe, as Jason in Euripides offers to Medes to doe. Περὶ τῶν τούτων σύμβολ' ἐπὶ δεξιῶσι σ' ἔδωκα. And to send a

Symbolum or token to strangers that shall courteously enter-taine you. But of this enough, as also of Jupiter, whom celebrated in other Epithires I know by the Athenians. Apollo was next in request to Jupiter, invoked in danger or sudden events; hence ἢ ἀπιέπικτος, from ἀπιέρειν, to turn away, as if he

he should deliver them from eminent evil, for which reason he is called Alexicacus. <sup>a</sup> Apollinem aspellentem mala intelligas, quem Athenienses Ἀλεξιακον appellant. He was one of the first Gods they had, hence is he termed <sup>b</sup> παλαιός, but <sup>c</sup> others thinke because he was the father of Ion. <sup>d</sup> Macrobius is of opinion, because the Sun the same with Apollo, is the Author of progenerating all things, quod sol humoribus exsiccatis progenerandis omnibus præbuit causam. To him stood Altars in their streets, hence is he ἀγυδῖς: as if he were set over their waies <sup>e</sup> Illi enim vias, quæ intra pomeria sunt, ἀγυδῖς. This Agæus was a sharp pillar <sup>f</sup> κίων ἢ στῆλῆς ὡς εἰς ἕξο λήγων. Although the Greeks, as <sup>g</sup> Macrobius saies, did worship him as θεοῦ ἀγυδῖος, exitus & introitus potentem, one that kept the doores of their houses, yet I finde no monument of that Title in Pausanias. Famous he was for the name of Paan, of which though I have taken occasion to speake elsewhere, yet this is a most proper place. I will not trouble you with the trivial derivations of the Greekes, which you read in <sup>h</sup> Athenens. When the Athenians asked helpe of the Oracle at Delphos against the Amazons in the daies of Theseus, the God bid them implore his succour in these words <sup>i</sup> εἰς Παιῶν. <sup>i</sup> Hanc vocem, id est εἰς Παιῶν, confirmasse fertur Oraculum Delphicum Atheniensibus, potentibus opem Dei adversus Amazonas, Theseo regnante. Namq; in tuto bellum jussit his ipsis verbis semetipsum auxiliatorem invocari, hortariq;. I doubt not but the words are changed somewhat, especially if we consider the ancient Io Paan. Paan, saies the <sup>k</sup> Scholiast of Aristophanes is a song or hymn praying for the ceasing of a plague, or war, nay for the preventing of apparent hurt. The originall of Io <sup>l</sup> Scaliger hath already found, Iao, and Io being contracted by the Greekes for Jehova; Paan then comes from Πᾶν to look, so that Io Paan is in force Jehova Penob, LORD LOOKE UPON US, it being a craft of the Divell to come as near as possibly he may to God, so to bereave him of his deare honour, if he could. S Aturne was worshipped by the Athenians, witness the feasts kept in honor to him called Κερίαι, witness a <sup>f</sup> Temple which he had in Athens. Of his antiquity I cannot much affirm any thing. He seemes to have beene of old, as I conjecture out of <sup>g</sup> Κερίαι γάμοις, Saturaina anitha, put for dotage proverbially. Vulcan likewise had his honour there, and a Temple, of which <sup>h</sup> Demosthenes, where was one of the Athenian prisons; some controversies in law in it decided, as I gather out of <sup>i</sup> Demosthenes. Neptune was an ancient Patron of this City, which he loved even to strife. He was feared for security in navigation; hence <sup>k</sup> Ασφάλειος. <sup>l</sup> Mars also had his worship, and Temple, and Hercules too, who in a dreame appeared to Sophocles, revealing unto him the sacrifice of one who had stolen a golden cup out of his Temple, called therefore Μηρῆς or Index Hercules, as <sup>m</sup> Tully.
Neither

Neither were they contented with such a quantity, but canonized more daily, as the sonnes of Tyndarus, Castor and Pollux, naming them ἀνακτες. <sup>a</sup> ἀνακῶς γὰρ ἔχειν τὸ ἐπιμελεῖσθαι <sup>a</sup> Plut. Theb. p. 11. l. 25. ἢ φυλάσσοντας ὅπῃν κ' τὸ βασιλεὺς ἴσως ἀνακτες διὰ τὸ το καλεῖσθαι. For they who have a care and watch of any thing doe diligently observe it ἀνακῶς ἔχειν. for which Kings perhaps are called ἀνακτες, as keepers of their people. <sup>b</sup> The Scholiast of Euripides teaches us that ἀναξ properly signifieth a Saviour. <sup>c</sup> Pan is said to be Αναξ Κυλλήνης, the Tutelar God of Cythera. And Apollo in <sup>d</sup> Homer. χρῖστος ἱεὶ ἀπόδασιν. The word is simply put for God in <sup>e</sup> Aristophanes, <sup>f</sup> τὸ ἐν θεῷ Ἀνακῆς κ' Σάπτης <sup>e</sup> Eurip. Sch. Καλλίμω. To these may be put Harmodius and Aristogiton. Lycus. Theseus. Alon. Hesychus. Aristomachus the Physitian. Celus and Metanira. And many more (of whom see <sup>g</sup> Meursius) made of men, as Silanius and Parrhasius that made the statue of <sup>h</sup> Theseus.

Minerva* the especiall deitie of the Athenians, had the Festivals called Panathenaea, of which you may fully read in <sup>h</sup> Meursius. Next to her Ceres and Proserpina, whose rites longe maximis & occultissimis ceremoniis continentur, <sup>i</sup> saies Cicero, were greatest and most hidden; therefore called mysteria from <sup>k</sup> μυστα, to hide; <sup>l</sup> death and a curse lying on him who should disclose their abominable secrets. See Meursius in his <sup>m</sup> Eleusinia, of the initiation into these stews. They were of two sorts. <sup>n</sup> Greater to Ceres, lesse to Proserpina. Bacchus also the sonne of Ceres had his Temple allotted and a double tide holy to him. Dionysia parva and <sup>p</sup> Magna. Venus had her honour and sacrifice, in which they offered to her <sup>q</sup> money the price of an whore. <sup>r</sup> Eumenides were first adored dored by Orestes after he escaped the Judgement at Athens in Arcopagus for killing his mother Clytemnestra. These by Hesiod are called Erinyes, by the Athenians Σεμνὰ Θεαί, the venerable Goddeses. To these they offered drinke offerings without wine though at mid-night, a custome peculiar to them alone, as Æschylus witnesseth, though I am not ignorant that Bacchus his feasts were kept in the night, whence he is called Nyctelius. But the Tragedian.

ἢ καὶ νυκτῆσι μενα δειπνα ἔω' ἐξάρρα πνεύει.

Ἐθυσὼν ὄσων ἕδενος κοινῶν Θεῶν.

*Scholias*t: ἐν γὰρ τῷ μεσσηνικῷ μόνως εἰνύσιν ἀπέρχοντο. By Sophocles the manner of oblation is set downe. First having cleane hands and pure, the worshipper ought to draw out of a running fountain water, and having filled three cups with water and honey (hence tearmed ἢ νηφάλια μελίσματα) the mouthes and ears of which are to be covered with the wool of a young sheep, turning himself towards the East, he powdered out some of two of them, but the third wholly; then with both hands setting thrice nine branches of Olive on the place where he cast his ῥοὰς, he uttered his conceived supplications. Other sacrifices they had as shall bee shortly spoken. Hecate was worshipped by them in trivitis, where three wayes met, supposed to be the Moone in heaven, Diana on earth, and Hecate below. To her the richer sort every new Moone made a feast in the crosse waies, setting bread and other provision, which the poore greedily fed on, and were so ravenous after, that Penia in Aristophanes complains, that they snatched it before it could be laid downe. Reference to this hath Ἐκκῆτα ἡγετε δειν, to eat the cates of Hecate, in Demosthenes, which he seems to object, as a sordid or wicked thing. Indeed βαμολόχος, which signifies one that privily taketh away any of the sacrifices from the Altar, imports sometimes impious, βαμολόχος ἀσεβής. *Schol. * Aristoph.* And yet the same *Scholias*t tells us that the needy sustained themselves by the sacrifices. καὶ καὶ πῶν ἰσθῶν γὰρ οἱ πτωχοὶ ζῶσι. *Juno*es rites were

THE Athenians before their dores erected statues which they called ἄσδς ἀνδάλιος, because they were exposed to the Sunne. Neither had they these alone, but certaine others sacred to Mercury, named from Hermes Herma, Mercurials.
 The fashion of them was divers. For first they were not ἀνατικτῶδες, porrecto veretro, but made after to that forme by the Athenians, who received it from the Pelasgi, as <sup>d</sup> Herodotus.
 Neither did they want legs, untill the Athenians made them ἀπόλυς, according to <sup>e</sup> Pausanias. The manner was this, A face of Mercury set upon a pillar of fowre corners. The head on-men; but the Herme on which they wrote the exploits of those that had merited, seeme to me to have beene set up in that gallery, which from the number of these images was commonly knowne by Ἐρμῆς Στάη the gallery of Mercurials. At the consecration of these they used some ceremonies, and sacrificed a kinde of gruell, which was of no great preparation; because they would not stand about it. Hence χύτρας ἱερύεσθαι may be said to sacrifice with that which costs but little. <sup>a</sup> Aristophanes. Χύτρασιν, ὡσπερ μεμβόλων Ἐρμῆδον, Schol. Ἐρμῆδον, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐν ταύτῃ. in Pace. Now to the erecting of their Images it will not be unseasonable to adde something of the forme of their Gods, whom they made standing with their hands upward, as if they were more willing to receive then bestow any thing. To which <sup>b</sup> Aristophanes alludes, saying, -- κ' ἄν θεοί. Γνώσει δ' ἄπο τῆς χειρῶν τε καὶ ἀθρομάτων. Οὔτε γὰρ ἐν χερσὶν δίδουσι τίνα δαί. Ἐσηκάν ἐν λείοντα πῶ χεῖρ ὑπὲρ. Οὐχ ὡς πῶσειν ἀλλ' ὅπως π λήψε. Even the Gods you shall know by their hands and statues. For when we pray them to give us some good thing, they stand with their hands upward, as if they would send downe nothing, but rather take oblation. To tell you likewise that these Idols were clothed, is no newes doubtlesse to one meanly versed in the Greeke antiquities. To say that they weare shooes too, is probable, whence they are named Dii Phacasiæ, from φακασία, a kind of low shooes which the Armenians called κοῦπόδες, from κόβη, dust, and πῶς, the foot, because they were neare the ground. Δα π πέλδ' ἔβη μοι δούλῳ τῷ κόνει τὸ πῶς, saies <sup>c</sup> Clemens Alexandrinus. But more sure I am that they were pictured with them on their feet. <sup>d</sup> Juvenal.

CAP. VI.

De Superfitione Atheniensium, &amp; vaticiniis.

Long since were the Athenians taxed by the Apostle for Superfition, which though it properly signifies a worshipping of the Gods too much, yet under it these follies are comprehended. Purification after fearfull dreames, in <sup>b</sup> Aristophanes ὄνειρον ἀποκλύζειν. In which sense some understand Persius. Noctem flumine purgare. Wearing of rings against witchcraft as a spell, called <sup>c</sup> δακτυλῖος φαρμακίτης <sup>d</sup> Spitting into their bosomes thrice at the sight of a mad man, or one troubled with an Epilepsie. Of which also Theocritus, τὸ εἰς ἐμὸν ἔπιψα κέλευρον. I know not whether the custome of our silly people have reference to this foppery, who use to spit at the naming of the Divell. Certaine it is that anciently they did spit in defiance, hence πύειν is put for καταφρονεῖν and ἐν ἔδει λόγῳ θύειν to contemne or set little by, as the <sup>f</sup> Scholiast of Sophocles on these words, πύσας ὡς τε δυτιμῶν. Washing with water the head as often as hee shall goe into the streets <sup>g</sup> καφαλῆς λέσαθς, <sup>e</sup> Theophrastus. Anointing of stones, divers it seemes from those heaps sacred to Mercury, termed <sup>g</sup> Ερμῆες. This hath beene of old. Done indeed as a token of thankfulness by <sup>h</sup> Jacob in Bethel, where he tooke the stone that he put for his pillows, and set it up, and powred oyle on the top of it in his journey to Padan Aram. Hennes crowing, the bold entrance of a blacke dog into their houses, Serpents seene ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ, saies Theophrastus, of which <sup>i</sup> Terence. In troiit in ades ater alienus canis. Anguis per impluvium decidit de regulis. Gallina cecinit. Put to these a <sup>k</sup> Cat or Weefell (the word signifieth both) crossing his way, the Mouse eating his salt bag. Antiquity was of opinion that sacred persons were defiled with the sight of the dead, as Chemnitius hath observed, and <sup>a</sup> Euripides brings Diana speaking, that it is not lawfull for her to behold dying Hippolytus; nay the standing upon a grave was a great religion; ὁσιβωῖαι μνήμασι. Furthermore observing of daies good & bad, of which <sup>b</sup> Hesiod, ἀλλη μιστραῖ, ἀλλή ἡ μήμηρ, that one is a stepdame, another a mother. <sup>c</sup> Amazement at the Eclipse of the Sun, as also the <sup>d</sup> Moone; not knowing the reason, why she did lose her light at that time, when she was in her full lustre. Buying of Medicines or enchanted stones for the quicker delivery in child-birth, in Aristophanes, ἀνωτοκει ἀνηπάμειος. Of the vertue I speake nought. <sup>e</sup> Boemus relates that in Darien in America the women eat an hearb when they are great with child which makes them to bring forth without paine. Joyn to this the sneezing over the right shoulder, or the right side, <sup>f</sup> παρὰ τὴν δεξιάν. Observation of Διοσημείας, or sudden storms, as the <sup>g</sup> Sch. of Aristophanes interprets it, snow, haile, or the like. <sup>h</sup> Cutting off their haire, and sacrificing it to rivers, as Cephisus. Marking the flight of the owle, whence came the proverb, <sup>i</sup> γλαῦξ ἐπέτατο, The Owle hath fled. And γλαῦξ ἔτατο for good lucke, the Owle being a token of victory to the Athenians, <sup>k</sup> ἢ πῆσις πῆς γλαυκὸς νίκης σύμβολον τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις ἐνομίζετο. and on each part made a letter, and putting wheat upon the letters they brought in a Cock, and observing from what letters he tooke up the grain, they at last joyned them together, and so knew their successors, husbands, &c. Σπειρομαγεία, opening a book of Homer, and by the first verse that they lighted upon to divine, as that of the death of Socrates, who so foretold it, meeting with that verse of Homer, which speakes of the arrivall of Achilles within three dayes at Thesfaly. <sup>a</sup> Et quoniam poemata pro vaticiniis, &c. and because poems were accounted prophecies, as Poets Prophets, they were most busie in them. Hence in publique causes had the Romans recourse to the Sibylline Oracles, & the private Grecians to the verses of Homer. And that Sors was put for the writing of Oracles, is manifest out of the words, Sortes Delphica, for foretelling or divination. <sup>b</sup> I know the she Priest of Apollo being inspired with a kinde of holy fury spake to those who asked counsell. Whence the word <sup>c</sup> μαγική at this time read for Soothsaying, was anciently called μαγική madnesse. And yet that their cunning men had a kind of lottery, is as clear as day, the <sup>d</sup> Scholiast of Euripides testifying; done it seems in matters of question, so κλήρον διχιδου may intimate as much as to undergoe triall. Predictions there were, <sup>e</sup> saith Enstath. out of signes and wonders, as also of the noise that leaves make when they are burned. To which some adde αἰσχυμαγεία or divination by the ayre, quoting for it Aristophanes in Nubibus, which I now remember not.

De Templis & Apylis.

THeir Churches were of two sorts; sacred to their Gods in Greek, ναὶς or ἱεῖα. And sacred to their Demi-gods most properly ονοί. But the word is promiscuously used by the Tragedians. Clemens Alexandrinus is of opinion that the first first originall of their Temples was the erecting of an edifice to the honour of the deceased <sup>a</sup> νεῶς ἢ εὐχάων ὑσμυζουμένης, <sup>a</sup> Vide p. 28. πέρας ἢ θυγατρὸς, τῆς τῆς πέρας νεῶς ὀπλιτευμένης. Cecrops buried in the Acropolis, Erichthonius in the Temple of Minerva, Polias, the daughter of Celeus in Eleusis, &c. They were divided into two parts, the sacred and prophane, this called ἕξω ἀεὶ ἱερὰ πύλαι or the other ἔσω. <sup>b</sup> Casaubon tells us that ἕξω πύλαι was that holy water set at the dore of the Temple, with which every one that entred into the Temple besprinkled himselfe, or was besprinkled by those that sacrificed; of which in the next Chapter. But others have written that it stood at the entrance of the Adytum, in which it was not lawfull for any but the Priests to come. The <sup>c</sup> Schol. of Sophocles thus describes the Church. Νεῶς, quoth hee, is the place where the Altar stands. Βωμῶς the Altar on which they offered their oblations, Πύλαι, where they placed the Idoll which they worshipped; in ancient time a rude table or stock <sup>d</sup> αὐτῶς Clemens Alexandrius calls it, as that of Juno Sannia, afterward made in the Magistracy of Procles to be a statue. At first named <sup>e</sup> ἕβανα, διὰ τὸ ἀποξείδου τὸ ὄλισ, from the shaving of it; but when art began to bee so expert to make it resemble a <sup>e</sup> Idem. man, they termed it βροτῆς, from βροτῆς mortalis, whose shape it bare. At the setting up thereof they used these ceremonies, That a woman neatly trimmed and deckt in a purple vesture should bring on her head a pot of sodden pulse as beanes, pease, and the like, which they sacrificed in thankfulnesse for their first food <sup>f</sup> εὐχαριστήσιον ἀπονέουσι τὸ πρῶτον διαίτης. For <sup>f</sup> Schol. Arist. as much as I conceive out of Pollux, they prayed not where π. 115. this was consecrated, or did divine honours, but in the ἱερῶ or ἱεῶς, the body of the Church framing, as may bee gathered, their gesture towards it. <sup>g</sup> Αὐτὰ ἢ ἀδεραπιδουρ. ἀγάλματα, ἕξω <sup>g</sup> Lib. 1. c. 1. αἶμα, ἕξω θεῶν, &c. Furthermore belonging to their Temples <sup>γ. 2.</sup> there was a kinde of Vestry, in Greek Ἀρχαῖον by some translated summum templum, as if it were at the upper end. This seemes to have been a Treasury both for the Church, and any ſoever, who fearing the ſecurity of his wealth would commit it to the cuſtody of the Prieſt, as <sup>a</sup> Xenophon is reported to have done at the Temple of Diana in Ephesus. Martial points at this, when he ſaies,

So reverently did they eſteem of theſe houſes of their gods, that to do thoſe offices of nature, I meane venting of excrements too ſhameleſly ſeen among us, in the Church-yards, as I may call them, was an abomination; puniſhed ſeverely by Piſiſtratus. For when he had taken tribute of all that the Attick ground had brought forth, they ſo hated him for that taxation as they made the θεοεργαſμα of the Temple of Apollo Pythius a Jakes; which although forbidden never was redreſſed. And yet ſo ſecretly was it done, that he could apprehend none ſave at laſt one ſtranger, whom he cauſed to be whipt, with this Proclamation, THAT BECAUSE HE CONTEMNED THE EDICT HE SHOULD DIE. Hence to a man that foundly ſmartered for his wickedneſſe, they were wont proverbially to ſay, He had better have eaſed himſelfe in the Pythæum, or if there were more, in the plurall number. Κρεττοβ ὡς αὐτῆς ἐν τῷ Πυθίῳ ἀποπατήναι. Nay ſo honourable held they theſe Churches that to them they granted priviledge of Sanctuary, to which who ſhould fly, might not from thence bee drawne out under a treſpaſſe upon religion. Of this kinde was the Temple of Minerva, and Theſeus, the Altars of the Eumenides, and Mercy, <sup>b</sup> whoſe image they would not have erected any where in their City, although in the miſt thereof ſhe had a Grove. <sup>c</sup> The firſt Aſylum among the Heathens is held to have beene in Athens, built by the He-racleide.

De Sacerdotiis.

OF holy orders among them I conceive to have been divers sorts, Παροισι, Parasiti, a word had in latter times in great derision, exagitated almost in every Comedy, put for a shark or smell-feast, Edax Parasitus. But held once in good esteem. For when they had set aside such a parcell of land as they thought the renewes thereof would suffice for the <sup>the</sup> ~~the~~ of such and such Gods, they chose certain men who should receive or gather the harvest. <sup>b</sup> Crates, δι' ὅτι πλεὶς τῶν θεῶν οἴτε ἐκλογῶν αἰεὶ ἔδρουσι. With the incomes of this were the charges of those publique sacrifices defraied. Hence περὶ οὐρα μὲν γὰρ Introitus magni, great yearly substance, is used for great sacrifice in <sup>c</sup> Aristophanes. Scholiast. ἔγω ἢ ἄλιγον τὸς περὶ παραμύθας τῶν θεῶν δούλους Κήρυκες. Ceryces, the same signifies a cride, but in sacred functions a Minister, who slew and offered the victim. <sup>d</sup> Anthensio the Comcedian ascribes much honour to them, as if they had first taught men to seeth victuals, the flesh of sheep and oxen, while before they devoured each other raw. They take their names from <sup>e</sup> Ceryx the sonne of Mercury and Pandrosus. But <sup>f</sup> Casaubon, ἀπὸ τῶν κρείττωνων. A praestantiore parte numeris quod obibant, sic disiti. Idem namq; hostias maculabant, odolebant q; &c. They in the time of divine rites craved the silence of the people in these words, Ευφημεῖτε. Σιγὰ πῶς ἔστο λεώς. Be whist all yee people. Good words, for εὐφημεῖν signifies, as well as to say nought, which Horace fitly interprets when he sayes, Male ominatis Parcite verbis. When sacrifice was ended they dismissed the congregation with these words λαῶν ἀφῆσιν. To which custome he unfitly looked who derived the Mass from Missā est, ite, better fetcht in my minde by <sup>h</sup> Wichelins from Masab the Hebrew which availes as much as to praise. Μυσταγογοί, the same

These were the νεακόμενοι, whose charge it was to preserve that which was found in the Church, and to see that repaired which went to ruine, saies <sup>g</sup> Aristotle. And yet we read that the Parasiti did sometime look to the mending of it. There being a law enacted that what they laid out should be restored againe. ἱερατῆς in <sup>h</sup> Aristophanes likewise termed κερετολοι. These are the Priests ever waiting on the Gods, whose prayers the ancients required at their sacrifices, out of which they had a fee, <sup>k</sup> the trotters and skinnes, as the <sup>l</sup> Cercyes the tongues. And indeed there was no necessity, for there being tables in their Temples, as <sup>m</sup> Casaubon teaches us, whereon they might lay their oblations (and perhaps sometimes depart) of which the Priest according to his stomach did share. Well known to <sup>m</sup> Aristop. who relates the like of the Priest of Esculapius. It was requisite to this function that they who undertook it should be sound both wind and limb, they being asked ἱερατῆς before their creation, whether they were whole in every member; which ceremony to have been used among holy orders of latter daies is well known, their neighbours neighbours wives bearing record, saies <sup>a</sup> Christianus, that they have not taken into their societies quid mutilum. ## CAP. IX.

THE father of Philosophie is of opinion that Sacrifices first began after the ancients had ended their harvest. For then being free from care, they found time for mirth and jollity. In which they offered their first fruits called ἀπαρχαί, from whence ἀπαρχαί is read generally to do any sacrifice. Neither doth ἀναστυλα import lesse. For ἀναστυλα signifies the bend, or great chest of the garnet, wherein they laid up the harvest threst & winnowed; ἀρχή, the first or beginning, as if when they began to treasure up their store, they first of all liberally paid some devotion to their Gods. The Attick oblations, even to Draco, were nothing else but the earth benefi- <sup>c</sup> Vale Schol. Eur. in Phœn. l. 2. v. 1251. cence, but before Solons age burnt offering, who willed in his laws, that they should be ἐκλεκτά τελεῖα, chosen and selected sacrifices. The rites performed in them were not different from those in the daies of Homer, but somewhat reformed. It behoved them that would take in hand these holy things to purifie themselves some certaine daies before, <sup>d</sup> ἀνεπαρκέσθαι ἢ ἀνεπαρκέσθαι ἀεὶ δὲ μὲν, the number of them is not set down. I take ἀνεπαρκέσθαι here to abstain from carnall delights, Tibull. Disci- <sup>d</sup> Plur. p. 65. l. 26. they cal- <sup>d</sup> Antiq. p. 524. d Demoth. pp 200. 476. *dite ab aris. Bring thus prepared they came and stood round the Altar, having with them a basket in which was the knife hid (covered with flower and salt, in <sup>a</sup> Aristophanes ὀλα. in <sup>b</sup> Homer ἐλογυῖ) with which they cut the throat of the victim. Then they purified the Altar going about it with the right hand towards it. <sup>c</sup> Aristophanes Περὶ δὲ τῶν βωμῶν ταχέως ὄπι δούξιά. This instruction was made with meale and holy water sprinkled thereon. This water is called <sup>d</sup> χέρνιψ in which they quenched a firebrand taken from the Altar; with which they bedewed the standers by, accounting it a kinde of cleansing, (Hence <sup>e</sup> χέρνιψας ἔχειν was forbidden him whom they took for a polluted and forlorne rogue.) Then they cast some of the flower on them. And having thus expiated, they cried out, <sup>f</sup> τίς τῶδε; Who is here, to which they made reply, Πολλὰ κάρησός. Many and good. Then they praied. <sup>g</sup> Homer, Εξείης ἔσταν ἐὸ δμῆπτον σεί βαμόν. Χερνίφαντο δ' ἔπειτα, ἢ ἐλογυῖται ἀνέλοντο, τοῖσιν δ' Κρόνους μεράλ' ὄχετο χέρνιψ ἀνασχάν. Among the latter they spake with a loud voice ἐυχόμεθα, before they began, Let us pray. Supplications ended they drew the victime so as (if it were to the Gods above) the head might looke upwards, which <sup>h</sup> Homer, αὐ' ἐρύειν. Eust. εἰ μὴ τῶς ἀνα' ἔσταν, ἀνεκλῆν ἢ τῶ ἱερέω πρὸ χθλόν, ὡς ἀφορᾶν, ὡς εἰς τ' ἕρανόν. If it were to the Heroes or Demi-gods, with his throat downwards. Then they slew him & skinned him, & cutting out the *huck shin-bones and hanch, they covered them with fat, which is called κρίσι (hence the Gods of the heathen are deciphered by <sup>i</sup> Nazianzen, κρίσι χαίροντες, rejoycing in the fat) to the end that they might burne all out in a great flame. <sup>k</sup> ὡδ' ἄσπουδὴ ὀλεκενσωδίωαι τῶν μηρῶν λαμπρῶν καταφλεχθῆντας πνέει. For the Grecians accounted it unluckie if it did not so consume, and thought that it was not κολιέσθαι. upon the μηρῶν they cast small peeces of flesh cut from every part of the beast, beginning with the shoulder (which is in Greek ὤμο) hence this is called ὠμοθήειν. The reason Eustathius gives, <sup>l</sup> ὡς δοκεῖν χεῖ τῶν παλαιῶν, ὅλα ἔπι τὸ μέρη τῶ ἱερέω καρπῶδες, that they might seem to consume all, which the Athenians did not, being commanded by law to carry some of the sacrifice home. reason of which in junction, they did so strain curtesie of their gods, that the illiberall or nigardly sort of people would sell that which was left, and so make gaine of their devotion.

<sup>a</sup> Τὸ πρῶτον ἐπειὴ πλὴν τῶν ἰδέων τὰ κρεῖα ἐπιπέδιδόντων, saies <sup>T</sup> Theophrastus; where <sup>b</sup> Casaubon notes, Cūxam ferè offerebant, aut intestina, aut aliud non magnæ rei persæpe. They offered the hanch bone or the intralls, or somewhat of no great worth. Where by entralls you are to understand the spleene, the liver, and the heart, which Homer calls ἀλλὰ γὰρ, for though the word be taken for the bowels, yet it signifies the heart too, in which sense we say ἀσπλάγχιος ἀνὴρ, a pusillanimous man, & εὐσπλάγχιος a couragious, as the Scholiast of Sophocles teaches us. & so ἀσπλάγχιος ἐλέος, the bowels of compassion. These the ancients did divide among them at sacrifice to feed on, and afterwards cut out the rest to rost. For whē they had finished their devotions, they let the reins loose to all manner of voluptuousnesse, gluttony, and drunkennesse. For oft-times they left nothing of their sacrifice, especially when they offered to Vesta, whence the proverb, Εἰς ἅα θύειν, is to eat up all, like the Roman Lari sacrificare. To say that publickly they begun to Vesta were more then I could well prove; but that they did so is plain. In their houses they had Altars, and so I supposed once Ἀφ' Ἐστίας ἀρχέσθαι to be taken, but this was done in Libaminibus, in their drinke offerings, as he on <sup>d</sup> Aristophanes. As

De Anno Attico.

THE ancient Greek year consisted of three hundred & sixtie daies, each month consisting of thirty. Rude antiquity ignorant of celestiall contemplations, deeming the Moon to finish her course in that space. Which according to <sup>b</sup> Petavius seems false. Lunaris enim non fuit, sed ejus menses tricenis diebus constabant singuli. By which reckoning, had they not used intercalations, they had soone found a maine difference in the times, when they ought to have celebrated their festivals. They made therefore a Tetraeteris, in which when they found seven daies deficient, they supplied them by adding \* 2 to every end of the year, called διὰ εἰς ἡμέρας, id quod per illud biduum Athenæ Magistratibus carebant, because for those two daies Athens was without Magistrates. But the last of these foure had but 359 daies, besides the two ἡμερολόγια, in respect to the Olympick games, ever kept in the Olympick games, ever kept in the \* full Moone, which could not have happened, had they began the Tetraeteris with a new Moone. Neverthelessse the Sunne and Moone appearing 14 daies oddes in a Tetraeteris, they made every eight yeare an interjection of one Moneth, that this time being ended the course might still returne the same. This all Greece observed, saies Petavius, by the Athenians termed μυσήρα, by the people of Esis an Olympiad. What kinde of Lunary yeare was in use among the Grandfires of Greece, is not truly knowe; by Petius delivered to be of D: 347. every Month 29 D: except one, which like our February had but 28 D: Every two yeares one Moneth was inserted, once of 29 D: another time of 28 D: But because in two yeares this \* magnus annus surpassed the Moon 15 D: itaq; Tetracterida fecerunt. This consisted of 3445 D: 723 & 722 make 1445. So many daies 354. foure times doubled hath, if you please to adjoyne 29. Of this sort of calculation doth he understand Geminus. Ἰὲς μὲν τριαντημένης ἦσαν, καὶ ὁ ἐπιδήμιος ποτὲ ἐπιμήνιος. That must be fitly understood, quoth hee, for they did number the Months as if they were 30 D: when notwithstanding they had but 29. Petravius is otherwise conceited, who takes the Schollast of Aristophanes in that sense, as meaning 29 D: full ones, when indeed exactly taken according to Geminus you may account 29. 1. 1. and Ulpian, ἐπιδήμιος ἐπιμήνιος 29. And yet are we not destitute of authority; that a Moneth was supposed 29 D. Theon. Μῆνας ὁ λεγόμενος, πέντε τοιαύτου Σελήνης ἢ ἡμέρας ἕσται ἐπὶ σωλοῦ, ὅς ὄντι ἰμερῶν καὶ, Ἐπὶ ὅσῳ πλείονος ἡμέρας ἦμεραν ἀνάγει, ἢ ἐπὶ ὅσῳ μείονος ἡμέρας ἔσται. Τὴν δὲ πρὸ μὲν ἐχέοντος αὐτῶν πλεῖν ἢ πελάσσον ἡμερῶν διαγαγῶν καὶ πρὸ ἐπὶ ἡμῶν πλείονος ἢ ἔλλειψαν. *Hee means a day the space of a night and a day, for according to such Moneths did they administer their civill affaires. And now it is in request among many of the Greeks. But of this enough. Soone was the Tetracteris found faulty; therefore was made a Kalender of eight yeares, in which doubling eight times the difference of the Sunne, to wit, 11 D:  $\frac{1}{4}$ . made up three Moneths, inserted every third, fift, and eighth yeare. But the scruples comming short in sixteene yeares 3 D: they intercalated three. And seeing still they could not make it even, Eullemon and Philippus made an Almanack for nineteen yeares, which by Callippus was produced to 76 Moneths 940. of them 28. *ἐμβόλιμοι, ἧ δὲ πέντε ἢ ἐμβολίων ἑκάστου ἐξήματα, saies Geminus. But we must look back again and consider that they counted their year two waies. First, of <sup>a</sup> CCCLX, as hath been already spoken, next CCCLIII, when they made their months interchangeably πλήρεις & κείυς, full and deficient, that is, one 29, the other 30 dayes, yet both Lunary. For that is proved even by the names of their daies. The first, wherein the moon appeared new, called by <sup>a</sup> Synalapha or contradiction of the words νεμῶνα. The second δωτέα. The eight δισχυλῶνα, or halfe fall: the full πυσιλλῶνα. The last τεμῶνα, <sup>b</sup> ἀπ' αὐτῆ τῶ σὺμβαινοῦσι, because that in the dayes of Thales Milesius, <sup>c</sup> who was the author of that term, the month had 30, and no more, but ended: whence I suppose <sup>d</sup> αἰ ἐρ' ἄρα τελευτᾶδες, signifie the dead, the period of whose life hath beene come to. Though Diogenian gives other reasons. And by the way we must not thinke, that they had no regard to the course of the Sunne; <sup>e</sup> sed tamen ut annus fieret Solaris, &c. But nevertheless that the year might be correspondent to the Sun, they put five daies, called ἐπαρόμῳνα epacted, to the last Month Scirophorion, for the supplying of the defect. And so the year had 365 D: which was the true and just measure. But hee might have added, sometimes 366, by reason of that <sup>f</sup> which Geminus acknowledges the Greeks to have reckoned, although they accounted their Months but 30 D. This is that annus implicitus, which <sup>g</sup> Aratus titles μέσαν ἐνιαυτῶν. To this point the Greeke Authors, telling the years by seed time. <sup>h</sup> Sophocles -- Εἰλομῶνα Αεφτραν ἔτις εἰς ἔτ. the precedent Month, and that remnant which was after the conjunction, appertaining to the subsequent. (These peeces <sup>a</sup> Aratus calls συνόντων Μηνῶν πύρατα) in which matter hee is thought to have had Homer in sight, who in his Odysses termes the thirtieth day, as Didymus expounds it, Τῆ ἡμέρῃ τῆς τριῆς μῶδος, ἢ τῆς ἡμετέρας. Where we may note that then they had no μῶδος, but counted from one to twelve in the ordinall numbers, used by <sup>c</sup> Demosthenes in one Oration, ἐν δεκάτῃ and ἐν δεκάτῃ ἑκατημῶντος. Then putting the letter to the greater they said τεῖτη ἔπι δεκά, τετάρτη ἔπι δεκά, the third above ten, the fourth upon tenne, and so to twenty. \* But when at the one and twentieth day they perceived the wane of the Moon to be great, and the light almost lost, they changed the order and used δεκάτη ἐθίνος, ἐνάτη, &c. the tenth of the decrease, the ninth of the decrease, and so to the twenty nine, δέ- τερα ἐθίνος, the second of the decrease, or from the end, going lower in number stil, as the splendor of the Moon was diminished, but the thirtieth they call'd ἔνη καὶ νέα for the cause above. Here likewise they take the reason why the Moneth ending was ἐθίον <sup>d</sup> Ἐπίθῃ εθίνον ὡστερ καὶ φθίρεται δοκεῖ τὰ φῶτα. Because the daies and Moons doe as it were die, according to that of Horace. Novæq; pergunt interire Luna. <sup>e</sup> Macrobii, quid aliud nisi illum φθίνοντα dicit, cujus paulatim deficientis supputatio in nomen definit secuturi: Ἐπιθῶν illum, qui precedit numerum successurus priori in defectum meanzi. Ἰσχυρως standing to supply the place of the departing Moneth; fixed and still waiting untill the Moone shall have journeyed to the compleating and ending of the precedent time. Thus the last day of our lives is said to stand. Virgil, Stat sua cuiq; dies, <sup>f</sup> as unto which we must passe through all the rest, and once approach. Thus squared they their times and state matters to the Moone. Hence read we μῶνας καὶ πάλιν ἀγειν, to count the Month as they do, who manage politick busineses, or belonging to government. In which course they made their yeare of CCCLIII daies, which divided into ten parts make ten times

In which table although Hecatombæon be compared to the Julian Moneth January, yet it appears not that Hecatombæon was ever so removed out of his place, as Petitus will have <sup>a</sup> *Ediog. Indeed <sup>P. 214.</sup> when the Christians in honour of their Easter began the year in April, they called April Hecatombæon, as <sup>b</sup> he himself <sup>c</sup> Loco laud. testifies. But that Hecatombæon, was alwaies the first Month is not probable. For when the Athenians under the dominion of Alexander the Great's successors changed the head of the year from July, to the seventh of October, it is like that they began at Memalterion according to this <sup>d</sup> rule.

Ελαγθεσίων.	March.
Μορυχίων.	April.

But of this, so much only. Wee must handle their Lunatic yeare because according to them were their feasts kept. From whence sometimes they would count, as <sup>1</sup> ποσπον κ' εσταν εκ Διονυσίων. IT is taken for grant among the Ancients, that Homer, who lived <sup>a</sup> 907 yeares before Christ, was the first that taught <sup>b</sup> τραγικῶς λέγειν, to speak in Tragœdie; comprehending great and weighty matters in few words and very concisely, being more large and using circumlocution in matters of lesse consequence, which Hermogenes acknowledges to be the propriety of a Tragœdian. This foundation being laid, following ages still built (though rudely) a structure to small perfection. Nam post illius tale tantumq; documentum, &c. saies Donat. For after that Homer by the Iliads had represented a Tragœdie, by the Odysses a Comœdie, most ingenious imitators took those Poems and set them in order, and divided them, which at that time were inconsideratly, & without judgement written, impolisht, and in the first rudiments not so neat & trim, as in processe of time they were made. For Poesie was a great while in her minoritic, and very rude, after the first publishing of plaies. For we see little or nothing of <sup>d</sup> Susarion, the first Comœdian, worth our time; some few verses only, & so few as may but witness such an Authour. The originall of the word-Comœdy is supposed to be taken from divers reasons: First, because in their revelling, kept in honour to Bacchus, they sung them, and so it may be derived from κῶμος, commosatio; κωμῶντες, signifying ὑπὸ τῆς αἰχρῆς εἶδεν, to sing basely at the cup. Secondly, from κῶμος, sleep; because when any of the Attick husbandmen had been injured, it was the custome (as before hath been spoken) for the party abused, to come in the the night season into the streets, and with a loud voice cry such and such rejoyce in wrong, and commit such outrages, though there be Gods and Laws. And after that, proclaimed the parties name, who on the morrow was fought out by the husbandmen and much ashamed; by which these wrongs were redressed. Thirdly, from κώμῳ, a street, because when the old Athenians would note a wicked mans life out to the world, meeting merrily in the streets and high waies, they laid open every mans life, and concealed not his name, <sup>a</sup> In vicis & compita ex omnibus locis lati, alacresq; veniebant: ibiq; cum nominibus singulorum vitam publicabant. These verses were first sung<sup>b</sup> in the green meadows, about the beginning of the spring; When the husbandmen kept the festivalls of Bacchus the God of Wine, to whom they sacrificed a Goat, because his biting is an enemy to the vine, the skin of which they took and sowed up close, filled with wine, and anointed it with oyle to make it slippery, and so hopped with one leg upon it, making themselves laughter at the falls they often tooke. This sport they call ἀσπιλιάζειν from ἀσπίς a skin and ἀλλεσαι, to leap<sup>d</sup> Aristophanes. Ἀσπιλιάζειν τῶν περὶ κῶμῶν ἀσπιλιάζειν. <sup>e</sup> Virgil hath fitly set it out.

After Susarion, sprang up Theſpis, the first that made Tragedies, which by Horace are termed, Lachrymosa pœmata, sad Poems; because they represent humane miseries, the misfortunes of Kings & great men especially, there being no place for a poor man, but only to dance, as<sup>e</sup> Arrian hath observed. Which thing gave an occasion to<sup>b</sup> Socrates, when he saw the most worthy & rich put to death under the thirty tyrants, to say to Antisthenes, doth it not repent thee that we in our lives never did some famous exploit? that such as Atræus, Thyestes, and Agamemnon are slain; but what Poet was yet so impudent as to bring a base fellow on the stage sacrificed? Not supernumerary is that of Enripides for K. Archelaus, desiring that he would write a Tragœdie of him, who prayed that nothing proper to a Tragœdy might happen to him; meaning sorrow and lamentation. For so is Tragœdia used, as Κομωδία for joy and mirth, and glee conceits. The first Tragœdie that Thespis taught was that of Alceſtis repriving her husband from death by her owne, as M<sup>r</sup> Selden hath conjectured. This Thespis was forbidden by Solon to act his Tragœdies, as ἄνωφελὴ ἄσπολοῖαν, a fruitlesse lying. Horace of him thus speaks:

*Ignotum tragice genus invenisse camæna Dicitur, & planstris vexisse poemata Thespis.
Quæ canerent agerent ὄρῳ peruncti sacibus ora.*

Upon which words some have written that his Poems were so voluminous, that he was constrained to bring them upon waines. But alas, a poore conceit! Franciscus Lusinius, Uticensis is of opinion that Thespis carried his scene upon cars: and Acron; That the Chorus carried about in waines acted Tragœdies. Chori planstris circumducti tragœdias agebant. I avouch that at the first the Poets acted alone their owne Fables; And to me it seems a ground for to stand on, the Greek Authors by the word ᾠκοειτῆς, intimating a Poet. Οἱ ἀρχαῖοι ᾠκοειτῆς, &c. The ancients, saies Ulpian, called the Poets Hypocritas actors, which we now terme Tragœdi, such as Enripides, Aristophanes, &c. The place in which they sung their Poems, was a Scene upon a wain drawn in procession to the honor of their God Bacchus, as among the Greeks the custome was, saies the Scholiast of Nazianzen. Of the manner in those ancient times, Plutarch shall thus informe you. Ἀμφοδὸς οἶνου κληματῆς, &c. A pot of wine and a vine twig, then one drawing a Goat, next another with a basket of figs, and last of all the Phallus. In which solemnitie the Poets in waines following the pomp, might with controle laugh, scorne, and deride any they met, saies Dionysius Halicarnasensis.

Which that they might doe the better without ſhame, or bluſhing, ſometimes would they anoint their faces ἀμύρκα, olei face, with the dregs of oyle, ſaies Donat. or of wine, (for ſo I interpret τρύγα) from which Poets by <sup>e</sup> Ariſtophanes are called τρύγαδαίμονες. Horace--Peruncti facibus ora. But I ſeem to forget the Poet, while I ſpeake of the ſtage, I will therefore returne to him. Theſpis, as I ſaid, was the firſt that invented Tragedies; ſo called, as Donat. tels, becauſe (leſt there ſhould be rewards wanting, by which good wits might be ſtirred up to write, and men encouraged to get them tunable voices ad dulcedinem commendationis) they gave the Actors a Goat. Cap per namq̄ pro dono his dabatur. τράγος is a Goat, and ᾠδή a ſong. Horace, Carmine qui Tragico vilem certavit ob hircum. Before him there was no art of poeſie Tragicall, but at their feſtivals, when they aſcribed all their mirth and delight to their gods, they did it eſpecially to Bacchus (and so afterward, when Actors are called, Διονύσι τεχνίτῃ, and τεχνίτῃ, simply by <sup>a</sup>Demosthenes, by Donat. Artifices. The word is used for Juglers, and such as Hokus Pokus in <sup>b</sup>Theophrastus) they would feast, and afterward scoffe and deride each other, which grew afterward a part of their solemnity. They would moreover dance at rude Musick, and from thence suppose they the Chorus to have sprung up. They would likewise cast forth ἄπορρητάκιμα, as they terme them, in <sup>c</sup>Virgil's language, versus incomptos, <sup>d</sup>Numeros innumeros eo tempore fundis solitos & sine arte. For they had of old but two sorts of verses, Heroicks, in which they sung the praise of Gods and Noble-men, and from this in a short time with small care grew a Tragœdie; the other sort was Iambicks as toying and lascivious as the Phallica, but biting too, and from hence came a Comœdie. At first small was the difference between a Tragœdy and Comœdy <sup>e</sup>constat sane, primis temporibus ignoratum fuisse discrimen inter Tragœdiam & Comœdiam, and the reason is, because even Tragœdies had their wantonnesse and petulancie. At first they sung in honour to Bacchus Dithyrambicks, and afterwards neglecting him they praised their Demi-gods, which when the people saw they cryed downe, with Οὐδὲν πρὸς Διόνυσον, whence our proverbiall adverb is fitly used ἀπρὸς τὸν ἴσως, for nothing to the purpose. But to give content to the people, the Satyres did Prælude. But after that, when a Tragœdy took state they excluded the Satyres, and were only for sad and serious persons; by which mournfull Poems the people were wont to be cast down, sympathizing with the person represented, therefore to cheer them, a Chorus of wanton Satyres were brought in by Thespis as <sup>f</sup>Horace.

persons are Satyrick and ridiculous, and for the easing of the in Comœdia examinari, factiones componi, ac gravissima subinde publico suppeditari crederent consilia. Not unfitly therefore did the Poet reply to the people that carped at him in the Theater. I came hither to teach you, not to be taught by you. Hence of a Tragœdie or Comœdie the Greeke writers say, <sup>a</sup> διδάσκω, docetur fabula, and διδάσκω, docere, as sometime διδασκάν, as you may see in <sup>b</sup> Athenans. The following Poets did not alwayes represent their owne Fables, but oft-times their predecessors; so saies <sup>c</sup> Quintilian, the people permitted the works of Aeschylus to be dealt with, because in many places his verses were not set in order. Hee brought great grace to the stage, & first taught πρωορασίαν. the painting of the Scenes; which some thinke Horace to aime at, when he saies, Modicis instravit pulpita cignis. Which because it was perfected by Sophocles, is thought (nay spoken affirmatively by some) to have been invented by him. Sophocles indeed did πολλά κενεργεῖν, bring in many new things, such as leaving out the action of the Poet (for before the Poet himself acted) by reason of the badnesse of his owne voice; hee found out white shooes, which the Actors and Dancers wore; he made the number of Dancers fifteen, before but twelve; he fitted likewise his Tragœdies to the natures of the Actors, &c. but that he invented πρωορασίαν I cannot finde. Somewhat likewise was added by Euripides: as to set out the Argument of the Fable in the beginning of the Tragœdie, as you may observe; leading the Auditor, as it were by the hand, to the last and principall point of that one action which he would represent, which by the glory of our nation, <sup>d</sup> St Philip Sidney is not past by, as frivolous, without noting. These three were the Princes of Tragick stile, who exhibited to the People every yeare at some certain solemnities their Poems, striving who should get the victory by the approbation of Judges, chosen for that purpose, called <sup>e</sup> Διορυσιακοὶ Κριταὶ, and ἑκατέρωθεν Διορυσίας. Ten in number, thinke some at first, gathering out of Plutarch, in the life of Cimon, authority for it. Because cause when he had brought the Reliques of Thesens out of Scyrus, Aphepsion the Archon, in gratulation to him, chose not the Judges as soon as the Theatre was filled, and spectators placed; but presently after Cimon entred the Theatre with nine more of his fellow Captaines, of each Tribe one, after accustomed sacrifice he swore them Judges, who gave the victory to Sophocles, but then young; for which Æschilus grieving went into Sicilie, where he dyed, and was buried near Gelas. But out of this place we cannot prove that the number of these Critick Judges was alwaies Tenne. This we acknowledge done in testimony of high acceptation of Cimon's service. And yet in judgement upon Tragedians, the number might be so great. For there seems to be a difference between the Judges of Tragedies and Comœdies. The number of Tragick Judges, grant we haply to be such as we speak the power incontrollable, as from whom there was no appeal to others. <sup>b</sup> Cum neq̄ provocatio ab iis esset, neq̄ de quibus illi judicarent, magistratus cateri sententiam pronunciarent. The Comick Judges were in number but five, from whence came the Greek proverb, <sup>c</sup> Πέντε κριτῶν ἐν γέραςι καὶ ἡ. Sub quinque Judicibus lis est. The <sup>d</sup> Scholiast of Aristophanes speaks somewhat uncertaine. Judges, quoth he, passe censures upon the Comœdians, & they who had five voices were happy. Those were all. For if there had been ten of them too, it would have made nothing to the Poets felicity to have had equal voices. For the odde gave a great stroake. Hence wishes the Chorus in the behalfe of the Poet. Ἐνὶ κελῖν νικῶν μόνον, to be victor by one voice only. Another difference is that, whereas the Tragick Judges had free liberty of suffrages beyond the power of the people, the Comick had not: For whē Aristophanes taught his Νεφέλαι, they so much took the people, that they applauded the Poet cried him up Conqueror, ὡς θεοτάτην τῆς κελῖς ἀνωθεν Δεισοφάνω, ἀλλὰ μὴ ἄλλον γέσθην, saies <sup>e</sup> Ælian, and commanded the Judges to write Aristophanes uppermost (as the fashion was,) which <sup>f</sup> Aristopha- πειν, by <sup>c</sup> Polkæ interpreted ἐδῶλιν ἢ πῆρταις κατακρούειν. Another difference is that <sup>d</sup> the Comick Judges were punished if they judged not right, the Tragick not so. And for these reasons have some conjectured, nay positively written, that their

Judges were of two sorts, old and new, in which matter, if there be place for a conjecture, mine is, that they confounded both, making no oddes between the Critick Judges of Tragedies and Comædies. But of this, Reader, you may determine as your Authors shall afford authority. Before Judges, as I said, the Poets in emulation presented their labours, & they who in their opinion lost the day, were said <sup>e</sup> ἐκπιθεῖν, by with more plaies then one. Alos autem Tragicorum Græcorum fuit Athenis, ut modo singulas committerent fabulas, modo plures, faies a Casaubon. Sometime in the same yeare three, and then was it called τετραλογία, sometime foure, and then they stiled it πεπρωτολογία, <sup>b</sup> Τὰ δὲ πρῶτα Δεξιμάτῳ ἐνομοῦτο ΤΕΤΡΑΛΟΓΙΑ Whereof, saies mine Author, the fourth was a Satyricall play, the three other now treating of the fortunes of one and the same man, as those of Æschylus, named therefore Orestia; to wit, Αγαμέμνων, Χορηγεῖ Ευριπίδης. Which are all extant; the fourth was Proteus Satyricus. At other times they were not of the same subject, as that of Euripides, Medea, Philoctetes, Dionys. The fourth was Θεῖα, saies the Author of the argument to Medea. Where the interpreter seems to me not to reach to the expression of the Greek word Θεῖα, Σατυροῦ; Messores, Satyros; he ought to have rendred it thus, Messores, Drama Satyricum. For that the word bears this sense is sufficiently dilucidated by <sup>c</sup> Casaubon. That the greatest task of action lay on the Chorus, is as apparent as the Sun at noone. The number of them in Comædies were twenty foure, and six juga (each jugum consisting of foure; but σείχαι foure, each σείχαι six men) in Tragedies fifty, untill the time of Æschylus his Ennemenides, the number of which so terrified the people, <sup>d</sup> that the children and younger sort fainted & the women suffered abortion; for which reason, saies Pollux, the number was lessened (which some deny) by law. They were by that Act brought to fifteen, five juga: I say juga, because they were divided into σείχαι, and ζυγά ζυγῶ. was when the Chorus entred by three, and then it was called κτὶ ζυγὰ πέντε, by file. Σπείχαι, when they came on the stage in rank five at a time; and this they terme κτὶ σείχαι. Sometime one of them entered alone, which they say κτὶ ἕνα. Of interlocutors the ancients for the most part never had above three; but if a fourth spake, that they named ἑταχορήσιμα; and if the Chorus supplied the part of a fourth actor, it was stiled παρωκλήσιον. To speak of the severall verses of Tragedies, is ἀκτὴν ἀγερε:

and I had rather speak of the action, then the art in composing & yet not much, only this of their motions, termed στροφὴ and ἀντιστροφὴ. Σῆξεν, saies the Scholiast of Pindar, is a turning from the right hand to the left, in analogie to the motion of the universe τὰ μὲν δὲ, from the East to the West; because Homer calls the East the right hand, the West the left: contrary to the Hebrews, who terme the South Jamin, which signifies the right hand, and the North they counted the left. ἀνστροφή was a turning from the West to the East, that is from the left hand to the right, as the Planets move. Another posture they had in their Epodes, for (if it be so in Tragœdies, as in Lyrick Musick, which I beleeve) to expresse the immobility of the earth they stood still. They used Epodes for the most part at the end of the Acts, when the players avoided the stage. Thus much of Tragœdies; the authors of which were highly of old esteemed of; insomuch as after the dismall discomfite of the Athenians in Sicilie, they were relieved, who could repeat somewhat of Euripides. Nay, by a law made by Lycurgus, and established in Athens, Æschilus, Sophocles, and Euripides had statues erected in brass for the continuation of their memory. After Tragœdies had proceeded to perfection, Comœdies were with great applause taught, as Horace,

Successit vetus his Comœdia, non sine vultu Lande--

He saies, vetus Comœdia, because a Comœdy was divided into three, or if you please so to speak, two sorts, the Old and New. I said three sorts, because * the old was different from it selfe. The meaning is, that the old Comœdy, of which Sannarion (by some named Sannyrion,) was author, tended only to laughter, being without order and decencie. For the Chorists, now walking, now dancing about the smoaking Altars, sung simplex carmen, some naked verse, saies Donat. Which by Cratinus was redressed; for he ordained three Actors, and mingled with his sport, profit, I mean for instruction. For under the Democracie it was lawfull to exagitate and propose for a laughing stock Captains and corrupt Judges, Citizens given to bribery, and such as lead a dissolute life, naming the men upon the stage and fitting the Actors with vizards, bearing the shape of those whom they intended to deride. But as the state grew to an Oligarchie, that licence was taken away, Eupolis being cast into the sea by those, against whom he wrote his Comedy Bapta, and so drowned. Nay there was a law enacted not <sup>a</sup> ὄνομασι κωμῳδεῖν, to name any whom they wrote that Comedy of. Of which Horace,

But when Alexander of Macedon grew potent and a terror to Greece, the Poets fearing lest any of their abusive wit might displeas the great Macedonian, they changed the Argument of their plaies; and instead of abusing states & people they fell upon ancient Poets, or some part of History not truly written, personating the Actors so as to be most ridiculous:

<sup>b</sup> Sometimes scoffing on the stage at mean men, and this they termed Νέα κωμῳδία, the new Comedy. Some are of opinion that no Player came on the stage untill thirty or forty; I dispute not the matter, for sure I am that Sophocles taught his first Tragedy at twenty eight, in which doubtlesse himselfe came on the stage. These were built by some, who upon some consideration of money admitted any to a seat, named therefore <sup>b</sup> Θεατρῶναι. Once it seems places were not hired. But there grew great enormities and abuses. For striving to get places, there rose wrangling and brawls, and fights; wherefore the Attick Senate ordained that each place should be hired for two oboli (in the Consulship of Diophantus, a Drachme, say some, whence rose the Proverb, <sup>c</sup> Δραχμὴ χαλῶσα; because at the establishing of it, there fell haile.) This money they called θεοικια, from θεοικίω, because with it they did θεῖαν ἀγοράζουσιν, buy a seat to behold the shew exhibited. Now because the poor people had not to give, & so were deprived of the spectacle; Pericles desiring to be popular, made a law that they should receive out of the Cities revenues two oboli each man.<sup>d</sup> For the right of exacting which money, they were to produce the authority of the Lexiarchicall Rolles, as appears out of Demosthenes. For the distribution of this were certain officers appointed, named ἐπιθεοικίω. But afterwards Apollodorus strove that in warre and publicke necessity, these summes might be employed in military affaires, but he endeavoured in vaine; Eubulus in flattery to the people, enacting it capitall for any that should attempt that which Apollodorus did; which makes Demosthenes desist, willing, yet not daring to perswade to convert the money to the use of the Army. But see the folly of them! For they spent as much on these sports as in obtaining the Mastery and liberty of Greece. And the end was miserable: for they became effeminate, and so put their necks under the Macedonian yoake.<sup>e</sup> Justin of the death of Epaminondas. Siquidem amisso, quem emulari consueverant, in segnitatem torporemq; resoluti, non ut olim in classem exercitusq;, sed in dies festos, apparatusq; ludorum, redditus publicos publicos effundunt: & cum auctoribus nobilissimis, poetisq; theatra celebrant, frequentius scenam, quam castra visentes. Versificatores Oratoresq; meliores, quam duces laudantes. Tunc vetus ægal publicum, quo ante milites & remiges alebantur, cum urbano populo dividi coeptum est. Quibus rebus effectum est, ut inter otio Græcorum, sordidum & obscurum antea Macedonum nomen emergeret, &c. Of the Theater I will say little, as also of the stage: Only that the places in the Theater were not promiscuous. For there was a distinction between the Senators and younger sort. The Senators was named βουλευτήριο among which it is probable the Judges had the first place, as Pollux. The seats for the youth were called Ἐφηβικόν. One part of the stage was Orchestra, in which was Θυμέλη, either a Tribunal or an Altar. That upon all their stages there was an Altar sacred to Bacchus, is apparant out of Donat: he saies it stood on one side of the stage, before the doores, Pollux: who names it Ἀλιδίς. There was moreover a Table called Ειδές, on which before the time of Thestis some body ascending in the Poets place, did answer the Chorus. Plutarch thinks Θιάσων to be derived from Θείς, because that before the building of Theaters the ancients embracing Musick only for institution of youth and praise of their Gods, sung the commendation of good men, and honour of their Deities in Temples.

<sup>S</sup> Justin hath been too forward in relating the mutation of the Athenian government, passing by the perpetuall and decennial Consuls, and naming only the yearly : so hath he erred in the originall of their Laws, making Solon the father of them. But it seems otherwise. For, as <sup>b</sup> Gerardus hath observed, Theseus gave Lawes to the Athenians. And <sup>c</sup> Plutarch witnesseth, that when he congregated the Attick people, and constituted a Democracie, he reserved only to himself the government of war and custodie of the Lawes. Δημοκρατίαν (αὐτοῦ) ὑπὲρ μόνον ἀρχοῦ π πολέμου καὶ νόμων φύλαξι χρησιμεύσω. Adde to this, that before the knowledge of letters & writing, it was a custome among the ancients to sing their Lawes, lest they might forget them, used in the daies of <sup>d</sup> Aristotle by the Agathyræ, a people neare to the Scythians. rules of Musick, for the true keeping of time, singing, & playing, are supposed to be called Nómoi. Neither may it be thought otherwise, because all the notes of the <sup>a</sup> Lydian, Hypolydian, &c. <sup>b</sup> Doriak, Hypodoriak, &c. <sup>c</sup> Phrygian, Hypophrygian, Ionick, &c. songs were distinguished by the Alphabet. Yet <sup>d</sup> Plutarch is of opinion, that they derived the word from those bounds, which the Musicians of old prescribed, for the tuning of voices or instruments, lest they should be confounded; and therefore he calls it, ὀκταία τῆτιν. <sup>e</sup> Idem. Nómoi ὅ περὶ τῆς μουσικῆς ἐπιπέδου ἐξέλιτο παραβλήται καὶ δικαστικῶν νόμων ὁμοίων ἢ τῶν τῆτιν. The Greekes, saies <sup>f</sup> Cicero, thinke the cause of this word, ius suum cuiq; tribuendo, intimating ἐμέμειν, which signifies to distribute, because the Law gives every man his due. Thus see we, that there were Laws of yore, let <sup>g</sup> Justin say, Nulla civitati leges tunc erant, quia libido regnum pro legibus habebatur; That the City was without Law, because the wills of Kings were Laws. In succeeding ages, and before Solon too, Draco gave Lawes, living about the three <sup>h</sup> hundred and ninth Olympiad. His Acts, saies <sup>i</sup> Ælian, were called θεσμοί. Ἐκαλέσθη δ' ἐκείνοι θεσμοί. Now θεσμοί, by <sup>k</sup> Ulpian is interpreted νόμοι ὡς καὶ ἀδελφοὶ πῶς δὲ νόμοι θεσμοί. A Law giving in precept how to make a Law. And yet <sup>l</sup> Aristotle calls them νόμοι, giving them this commendation, that they are not worth remembrance, but for their great severity. Which gave occasion to <sup>m</sup> Herodotus to say, that they were not the Laws of man, ἀλλὰ δράκοντος, in a double sense of the word which is also put for a Dragon. And <sup>n</sup> Demades, that they were not written with black, but blood. For he punished every peccadillo almost with death, those that were convicted of idleness, or stealing of potheerbs, alike the sacrilegious and man-slayers. Wherefore were they made of none effect by Solon. For he abrogated all, except those which concerned murder, intituled ΦΟΝΙΚΟΙ ΝΟΜΟΙ. Him succeeded <sup>o</sup> Solon, a man so well tempered, and equall betwixt the Commons and the Peers, that he was beloved of both

But it seems by <sup>f</sup> Ammianus Marcellinus, that in the making of his lawes he had the approbation and judgement of the Egyptian Priests. Et Solon adjunctus sententiis Egypti Sacerdotum, latis justo moderamine legibus, Romano quoq; Juri maximum addidit firmamentum. <sup>g</sup> Diodorus Siculus relates two things brought from thence to the Athenians by him. First, that all the Egyptians were compelled to bring to the governours of the countries their names written, and by what meanes they sustained themselves; wherein if any were found false, or that lived by unjust gain, he fell into danger of life. Secondly, it was a custom among them, that payment should be made only with the goods of the debtor, and that the body should not suffer. For they thought the citate alone to be subject to the creditor, the body addicted to the Cities in which they lived. Neither was it fit that Souldiers, who were to undergo hazard for their country, should for usurie be committed to prison, or the country be in jeopardy for the avarice of some one man: Which induced Solon to make the first decree, as <sup>h</sup> Laertius and <sup>i</sup> Plutarch say, of freeing the bodies; which, if there were not wherewithall to satisfie the craving loaner, were compelled to serve. He therefore cut off all usie, <sup>k</sup> as some write. or else <sup>l</sup> lessened the burthen of it, making it more moderate by his Law σεισάχθηα. so called from σεισν, to shake off, and αχθη, an heavy weight. tending to a mans disgrace. But this by the way. These Tables were kept in the Acropolis, translated afterwards to the Prytaneum by Ephialtes, where to the dayes of <sup>a</sup> Plutarch, some reliques of them were to be seen. The Autographon, or copy written with his owne hand was not removed, but those that were transcribed by them. Because in matters of doubt and controversie they might have recourse unto them.

\* For the distinction of which, some think that  $\delta \chi \alpha \tau \omega \theta \epsilon \nu \nu \omicron \mu \textcircled{\ast}$  is used in Demosthenes for that in the Prytaneum. Others for the Law in the lower part of the table; but to me it seemes improbable, for then the number of the table ought to be cited; and indeed, one Table sometime could not containe a Law. For we read in <sup>b</sup> Plutarch, that the eight Law was cut in the thirteenth Table. I am not averse from the guesse of Petitus, who supposes the Orator to meane the Law which afterwards he quotes; not ignorant of the opinion of some, who think that it is to be understood of the under line. For the Lawes being written βασπορῶδες, converso sive retrogrado literarum ordine, saies <sup>c</sup> Silburgius; which <sup>d</sup> Pausanias explaines,  $\delta \pi \eta \tau \alpha \lambda \alpha \mu \acute{\alpha} \epsilon \kappa \delta \epsilon \xi \iota \omega \nu$ , from the right hand to the left, <sup>e</sup> or more significantly,  $\text{Α} \pi \omicron \tau \omicron \varsigma \pi \acute{\epsilon} \rho \alpha \lambda \textcircled{\ast} \tau \omicron \varsigma \acute{\epsilon} \tau \epsilon \varsigma \delta \pi \rho \acute{\omicron} \phi \eta \tau \acute{\omicron} \epsilon \pi \omega \nu \tau \omicron \delta \acute{\omega} \tau \epsilon \varsigma \tau \omicron \varsigma \acute{\omega} \sigma \pi \epsilon \rho \epsilon \nu \delta \iota \acute{\alpha} \lambda \lambda \epsilon \delta \rho \acute{\omicron} \mu \omega$ . When the second verse begins at the end of the former, as in the race which they call Dianlus, or if I shall speake nearest to the word, as husbandmen turne their Oxen when they plough, as for example.

ΕΚ ΔΙΟΞ ΑΡ See those that have written of divers ὙΘΣΗΜΥΧ waies of writing.

They therefore take the lower, that is turned,  $\delta \chi \alpha \tau \omega \theta \epsilon \nu \nu \omicron \mu \textcircled{\ast}$ . After this manner were the Lawes written, and doubtlesse there were some customes as strong as Lawes. For although the Lacedemonians governed by tradition of custome, and the Athenians by written statutes, as <sup>f</sup> Josephus, yet surely had their customes great force, inso much as <sup>g</sup> Aristophanes uses  $\nu \omicron \mu \textcircled{\ast}$  for  $\acute{\epsilon} \delta \omicron \varsigma$  -  $\text{Α} \iota \chi \rho \epsilon \iota \nu \omicron \mu \omega \kappa \epsilon \alpha \beta \acute{\alpha} \rho \mu \eta \alpha$ . <sup>i</sup> Scholiastes.  $\nu \omicron \mu \epsilon \nu \iota \delta \delta \acute{\epsilon} \pi \acute{\alpha} \rho \tau \alpha \tau \acute{\alpha} \gamma \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \mu \mu \acute{\alpha} \rho \omega \nu \epsilon \eta \sigma \iota \nu \acute{\alpha} \lambda \lambda \acute{\alpha} \tau \omicron \delta \acute{\epsilon} \delta \omicron \varsigma$ . divide their Laws into ἔγγραφοι & ἀγγραφοι, written and unwritten. The unwritten, sine scripto jus venit, quod usus approbavit, use. The <sup>a</sup> Interpreter of Sophocles thus. Νόμος ἔστιν ἔγγραφος σιωπῆσαι, σιωπῆσαι δ' ἀγγραφος νόμος. A Law is a written custome, and a custome an unwritten Law. Besides these there were decrees, which they termed ψήφισματα, a word used by <sup>b</sup> Cicero, nothing different, ψήφισμάτων ἑδραίων διαφύρασι ἐν νόμοι. <sup>c</sup> Demosthenes, who means in vertue and power. For they differ much. <sup>d</sup> A Law maintaines justice once found, common for ever. A Psēphisma follows the necessity of the time, as it differs in events: it directs not warlike affaires, but is applied unto the occasion of arms, and as lawes can be abrogated, so degrees changed. And here ought we to note, that no decree is greater then a Law. Of decrees there were two sorts; <sup>e</sup> ἡ Βουλῆς ψήφισματα, such as the Senate by it self established, which were but of twelve months continuance; to the confirming of which, the people were not convocated, or their consent required, termed <sup>f</sup> προβουλεύματα, which Demosthenes proves to be ἐπίστα Ulpian ἐπὶ ἐνιαυτῷ. Like to the edicts of the Roman Prætors which lasted but a year. <sup>g</sup> Cicero. Qui plurimum tribuunt edicto, Prætoris edictum legem annuam esse dicunt. In other decrees the opinion and good liking of the people was asked, for the giving of the authority unto them, which endured in force a longer time. <sup>h</sup> τὰ δ' ἑστὶ τῶ δόμοι γινόμενα, καὶ πλείονα μῆσι χρόνον. And therefore wee may easily know a probuleuma from a decree of the peoples confirming, by this observation. Ἐδῆξε τῷ βουλῆ only, gives us to wit, that it is a probuleuma. Ἐδῆξε τῶ δόμῳ, in the beginning of a decree, shewes it to be ψήφισμα παρὰ δόμοι κέρθ' ἀλάβανον. The Senate alwaies sate in consultation about that which was to be enacted, whether any damage might accrue to the State by it or no, the Law commanding that no decree should go forth without deliberation. <sup>i</sup> ἀπεσβέλετον. Ἠφίσματα μὴ εἰστέναι ἐν τῶ δόμῳ. Which done, the Prætoribus took certain Tables and wrote on them,

Such or such a day, about such a time there should be an assembly to consult of these and these affaires: and this they called <sup>a</sup> σουλ. α. παγ. 55. vid. Ulp. in Dem. p. 240. σουλ. α. παγ. 55. vid. Ulp. in Dem. p. 240. When then they were assembled, and the people purified, the decree was read; which if the people allowed of, stood; if not, decayed. It was forbidden that any should raze out a Decree of any Table. And he was brought in question of life, who should presume in making a decree to pretend a fallacie. Now because future time might haply perceive some inconveniences to arise by oversight in their Lawgiver, and that as abuses should happen, which in his dayes were not discerned, so there would be a necessity of making new statutes: It was ordained therefore that every yeare there should be ὅτι χειροτονία νόμων, which <sup>b</sup> Ulpian expounds διόσκεψις ἢ, π δεῖ ποτεῖν ἐπὶ τῶν νόμων. A consideration of what ought to be done concerning the Laws. <sup>c</sup> The manner was thus: Every eleventh day of July in the assembly after the Crier had made his prayes, as his fashion was, and shall anon be spoken of, the Laws were read over in order. First, those which concerned their Senate, next the weal-publique; and thirdly the nine Archons, & afterwards the other Magistrates. Then was it demanded if there were Laws enough for the Senate, and so for the Common-weale, &c. If any of the Laws in force were to be abrogated, it was adjourned untill the last of the three daies of the 3 Convocations. On which the Prytanes appointed for the revising and reciting of the Lawes, were to take the matter in hand. The Proedri chiefe of the Assembly, were to <sup>d</sup> acquaint them with it. Five men at the first meeting were chosen out of all the Athenians, who should patronize the Law to be abolished; and according to the judgement of the Nomotheta, chosen out of the Councill of five hundred, was the businesse carried, that the Lawes should be of none effect, or full strength. Whosoever would bring in a new Law, was to write in a Table, <sup>e</sup> σουλ. α. παγ. 55. vid. Ulp. in Dem. p. 240. *σουλ. α. παγ. 55. vid. which standing in a place conspicuous, that some certaine daies before the Sessions, any Citizen might read what was to be handled; and if any so pleased, he might at the proposall of the Law declare his mind either for, or against it, as at the preferring of a Bill in our High Court of Parliament, where it is not denied any Burges or Knight of a shire, to speake his opinion pro or con, either with any whole Bill or some part thereof, or in opposition to it, or some one clause. Provided likewise that hee, who attempted to enact a new Statute, should take care for the disanulling of the old, that might contradict it, otherwise he came within the compasse of ἄδικη νόμος παρανομίας, a writ of Transgression of the Lawes: which was of two sorts. First, when time is not observed in writing them, ἄδικη ἢ ὀλισηδύρον χεῖρον. Next when one is made that is adverse to a former. And if it so hapned, that any perswaded the people to make a Law that was not commodious to the weale-publique, hee might bee questioned within <sup>b</sup> a yeares space; <sup>c</sup> but if the time was expired, he could not. <sup>d</sup> Nay, they slew Eudemus, a Cydia Athenian, for bringing in a Law they liked not; scarce different in that one example from the Locri; among whom, he that would propose a Law, should doe it, his neck adorned with a halter, that if his request pleased not, he streight way powred out his soul under the hands of the hangman. Their Orators, which are called δημαγωγὸι, because they lead their people with their Rhetorick and flattery, wrote Laws and decrees, as we learn out of <sup>e</sup> Demosthenes; and therefore are they deciphered by <sup>g</sup> Ἀθηναῖοι, οἱ λέγοντες ἐν τῷ ψηφισματι χαίψαντες.

med the Magistrates in their offices, if all things were managed well by them; otherwise they put them out. They heard publick causes, looked into confiscate goods, and possessions left by inheritance. In the second, any one with leave might freely speake of private and publique affaires. In the third, they gave audience to Ambassadors, who before ought to deliver their letters to the Prytaneis. In the fourth, they treated of holy things, such as belonged to their Gods and worship of them. The first meeting was the eleventh day of the Prytanea; the second, the twentieth: the third, the thirtieth: the fourth, the three and thirtieth. I finde a difference between the <sup>a</sup> Scholiast of Aristophanes and Ulpian in the daies on which they came together, one making the first day of the Moneth to be the day on which the first assembly was, the other the eleventh of the Prytanea, which seems truest. And whereas they both write that every month there were three lawfull assemblies, to wit, on the first, tenth, thirtieth; or tenth, twentieth, thirtieth, we are not so to reckon them, but according to the Prytanea, it being the Prytanes charge to congregare the people. They seem to have been called Κυβηται Εκκλησίαι, because in them they did κρῆν ψήφισματα, establish decrees, as the <sup>c</sup> Scholiast of Aristophanes. Other assemblies there were which are termed <sup>d</sup> σύνκλητοι, when war, or any sudden accident troubled the State, then the people were called together over and above those four times in a Prytanea. They are styled σύνκλητοι, because the people of their owne accord met on the other dayes; but when they would have a Convocation some went about the City and called them. There is likewise <sup>e</sup> κατεκκλησία, when they were summoned out of the fields to go to the Assembly. It seems to me that the Crier in the streets on their lawfull assemblies gave some token when they should hasten; and so much <sup>f</sup> Aristophanes witnesses bringing in the women speaking that it is high time to be stirring, because the Crier ἔπειτα δεύτερον κἀόκι κηκεν, had cryed the second time. And indeed need there was of some warning warning and compulsion too; for so slow were they in coming to assemblies, that the Logista were fain to thong them to the meetings, as the Schol. of Aristophanes on these words αἱ ἐς δ' ἴσαντες ἐν Λεωφόρῳ. Sometimes they tooke a rope, and dying it with red earth, they sent two slaves into the market place, who should one of the one side of the way, & the other of the opposite, pursue the people, & to whose chance it fell to be marked with the paint, paid a certain peece of money.

Hence in the <sup>b</sup> Comædian--Κατῶ καὶ κατῶ τὸ χορτίον ἐδίδουσι τὴν μίμλατ' αἰθέριον. Up and down they shun the cord stained with Vermilion. And again--ἡ μίμλα ὃν Ζεὺς εἰλάπειτε Γέλων παρέχον ἡμῶν ἐπὶ ῥαυτῶν καὶ κλάφ. Jupiter, the red earth which flew about made laughter. <sup>c</sup> Sometimes would they take Hurdles, and barracado all the streets except those that led to the Ecclesia: Sometimes take away all their saleable wares which they brought into the market, lest peoples intent on their traffique should absent themselves from the Assemblies. Whē they had met oft-times the company would be dismissed at some prodigious sign, as thunder, lightning, tempest, and the like, which they called <sup>d</sup> Διοσημεία, <sup>e</sup> and earthquakes, or other occasions, deferring the Assemblies meeting untill the next day. When they were come together, and the Senate ready to sit, one man sacrificed; which rites were called <sup>f</sup> Τισιπεία, because they were done at the entry of the Council. <sup>g</sup> Ulpian προηγείῃ γ' εἰσιέσεως ἢ βελῆς ὃ πὲς θυσίας ποιέωμεν. I will not justly say that it was the purification made with a young pig before the bench was sate; and yet I may presume to averre it; the Grammarian that interprets <sup>h</sup> Aristophanes witnessing that immediatly preceding the Sessions this custome was observed by one, who they named αἰεσιδαρχος, from αἰεσίσι, τὰ καθαρίσι, which signifies cleansing, because by that he purged the Assembly, Theater, and congresse of the people. After they were sate, <sup>i</sup> the Cryer did pray for the good of the people, <sup>k</sup> & cursed those who should offer to deceive the Senate or people. After this, he spake with a loud

CAP. III. SECT. I.

Senatu Περικλειῶν.

e Plut. Solone,
p. 60. l. 31.

WHen the mutinie between the faction of Mega- cles and Cylo disturbed the Attick commonwealth, Solon perswaded the people that those, whom for their auda-citie in drawing away the suppliants from the Altars they named ἐναγείς, should undergoe judgement, there were chosen <sup>e</sup> three hundred men, κλειστίδω, according to their worth, to sit upon the case. But these were not a perpetual judicatorie.
For when the people murmured at the cutting off of the usury

usurie money, then was the Grand Councill ordained; out of every Tribe, which were then but foure, an hundred chosen, who by their advice should direct the people in those things which were to be handled, lest any thing should be inducted, or proposed to the Assembly, without due consideration. Who from their office in a Democracie, Aristotle saies are more properly called πρόβουλοι, but where the Rout rules, Βυλλή. But when Clisthenes, who by Plutarch is termed ὁ καταστάτης πῶ πολιτίαν, had augmented the number of the Tribes from foure to tenne, eighty six yeares after Solon's Lawes were received, he made the number five hundred, taking fifty of every Tribe, which doubled ten times make up the summe. This Councill by Aristotle is described ἡ μάρις α κρεία πῶ παν. The Mistresse of all the rest, and I am not of opinion that ἡ ἀνω Βυλλή in Plutarch, is to be understood of the Areopagus, as if that were about the Senate, but as instituted first by Solon, and so related by the Author. And yet I know one writes, Tam dignitate, fama, quam officio, secundum post Areopagitas locum obtinere. To this Councill none was chosen under thirty yeares of age, which time is stiled Βυλλή πῶ ἡλικία by Libanius. And doubtlesse Plutarch justifies it, speaking that Demosthenes wrote his Orations against Androtio, Timocrates, Aristocrates, ἔπῳ τῆ πολιτίᾳ προσελήλυθα when he had not attained to the managing of state businesse, because he wanted two or three of thirty yeares. Agreeing to this is Juvenis, who saies that Solon admitted none very young, though very wise to Magistracie or Councill. Nay the Scholiast of Aristophanes tells us, that green heads were not permitted to speak publickly. The Law prohibiting any to attempt it under forty, or as some some say (which is truest) thirty, on these words:

Which to be otherwise understood by some, is not hidden from me. They were called likewise ἡλιασοί, as well as Πινυ πυλάσιοι, and their Tribunal ἡλιαία, from the word ἡλιζομαι, which which signifies to throng together, because the people were frequent there. But the more probable reason is, ἐν τῷ ὄρει ἔστι τὸ τόπον καὶ τὸ ἅγιον ἐν ᾧ ἐστὶν ἀεὶ ἥλιος ἀνατέλλειν, because the place was open and exposed to the Sunne. And in respect of this Aristophanes makes that cold conceit branded by Didymus, Εἰληματ' ὄρεθρον, ἠλιόσις παρ' ἡλίου, In the morning thou shalt shine in the sun shine. At their admission they had this oath given them. Ἐπιτάξιμα κατὰ τὸν νόμον, &c. I will give sentence according to the Lawes, and decrees of the people of Athens, and Councill of five hundred; I will not consent to bee a Tyrant, or bring in an Oligarchie: Neither shall my approbation be to any that will dissolve the Democracie of Athens by speech or decree. I will not cut off private use, or suffer a division of the Athenian lands or houses. I will not bring backe exile men, or those that are condemned. I will not thrust out of the citie any innocent against the Lawe and Statutes of the Athenians and Senate of five hundred: neither by my selfe or suffer any other. I will not create a Magistrate, who hath not given an account of his former office, whether of the nine Archons, or agents for the holy things, or they, who at the same day are chosen with the nine Archons by lot, Ambassadors and assistants. Neither shall the same man beare the same office twice, or twice in one yeare. I will not take gifts for judgement, neither my selfe or other for me, or others with my privacy, by fraud or deceit. I am not younger then thirty. I will heare both parties, the accuser and defendant alike. I will passe judgement aright on the thing prosecuted, I swear by Jupiter, Neptune, Ceres. * There is also another oath which they took; some clauses whereof, we have left in record. *To ratifie the Lawes of Solon. nished, so be accused or imprisoned for what is past. This last was made after the driving out of the 30 Tyrants, when <sup>a</sup> Thrasylbulus gave them to oath μη μνησικαχήσειν, not to remember ancient wrongs, which they call ἀμνησίαι. The authority of this Council was great, for it handled causes of war, tributes, making of Lawes, civill busineses and events, affairs of confederates, collections of money, performance of sacred rites, accounts of offices discharged, appointing keepers for prisoners, and ἀνωσία of Orphans, as Xenophon. Resembling our Court of Parliament in England, by whose consent all Lawes are abrogated, new made, right & possessions of private men changed, formes of Religion established, Subsidies, Tailles, Taxes, and impositions appointed, weights and measures altered, &c. As not unlike also the Venetian Gran Consiglio, or Senate, of which the Contarene. <sup>d</sup> Tutta la cura del governo della Repubblica appartiene al Senato, &c. The whole maner of the Commonwealths government belongeth to the Senate. That which the Senate determineth is held for ratified and inviolable. By their authority and rule is peace confirmed & war denounced. The whole rents and receipts of the Commonwealth at their appointment collected and gathered in, and likewise laid out againe and defrayed, &c. In a word, I may say of these five hundred, as <sup>e</sup> Budens of the Parliament of France: Amplissimam eam curiam causarumq; omne genus disceptatricem justam ac legitimam esse, that that Court is most ample, and justly and equally decided all sorts of controversies whatsoever. <sup>f</sup> To their charge was committed the making of new ships, for which at the yeares end they were to be rewarded by the people. them written into a vessell, and into another they put an hundred white beans and all the rest black; then drawing out a name, and then a beane, to whose chance the white beane fell to be extracted with his name, was designed Se- nator. This they did when they had but foure Tribes, and so foure hundred Senatours. But when they had ten Tribes, there could be but fifty white beans, to the making up of the tenth part of five hundred. This differs not from the election observed by the Venetians upon the fourth day of De- by lot obtained the right of citizens, nor passed twenty five yeares old, are put into a pot, and carried unto the Prince, & with silver. The Prince taketh out of the first pot the ball, which if it be of the golden sort, the young man whose name is drawn, is presently admitted to publique authority, they to whom the silver chance, lose it for that time, expecting it in choosing I deem the same, & shall untill I find authentick they added two, the number was increased 100, by reason of the Tribes Antigonis and Demetrias, after named Astalis and every one of them was noted with a red letter, A, B, Γ, Δ, E & c. to K, over the dore) time calling them to sit, they drew lots, and he to whom A. was taken out, sat in the Court noted with A. and B with B, and so to K. This done, they shewed their lot to the Præco of the Judicatorie, who gave them their Wand & Table. This they did, lest any should rashly attempt to sit, and pervert Justice. I know not whether I may better call that rod of authority a wand or staff: because that <sup>a</sup> Βαν-περα κὶ ρῆμα κὶ πειβάδιον ἢ πειβάδιον, was as a proverb used in division of the Judges. <sup>b</sup> This staffe at the daies end they brought to the Prytanes, who gave them their wages; But the <sup>c</sup> *Scholias*t teaches us otherwaies, saying that the Demagogi paid them, it being manifest out of Cleon's words the Oratour, ὦ γέροντες Ηλιασαι, φερόμεν πειβάδιον, οὐς ἐγὼ βόσκω-- Judges which I feed. Their pay was not alwaies the same, <sup>d</sup> ἐχ' ἰσάσιο, <sup>d</sup> saies the Interpreter of Aristophanes. First they had obolium, which Calistratus, surnamed Parnytes was author of. Hence the proverb <sup>e</sup> Ὀβολὸν δὲ πειβάδιον. Afterwards it was augmented by Callicrates, and from him grew the word <sup>f</sup> καθημεράτις, it may be for a pretty summe of money. Nay it changed, for now I read of Ὀβολὸς Ηλιαστικός one, and anon <sup>g</sup> τριβάδιον three, a <sup>h</sup> Drachme to two. And therefore may wee conclude that it was sometime more, sometimes lesse. Thus having spoken a litle of their Judges, I proceed to their cases of Law, in which I shall adde.

When any had received wrong in Athens, it was their custome to make their cases known to a Magistrate, whose office it was to report to the Judicatory. And this they did by a Table in which was written, <sup>h</sup> κατηγορῶ τὸδε κὶ προδικῆμαι τῷ πινδία τῷ δῆμῳ εἰς τὸ δικαστήριον. I accuse H. B. and cite him to the Court by W. N. not unlike the Romans proceeding, who brought the name of the delinquent to the Magistrate before the accusation; to which Plautus alludes. Ibo ego ad tres viros vestros, ibi nomina Faxo erunt. - when this note was given up, the Magistrate asked the Plaintiffe, whether he had witnesses witnesses and would prosecute the matter, who answering that he intended it, had thereupon authority to summon the Defendant to his appearance, and this he did either by himselfe, or other, called therefore κλητήρ, <sup>a</sup> for κλη̄τις is ἡ ἐν ᾧ δι- κμῆς εἰς παραγωγήν, a bringing into suit. καλῶν ᾧ δ' εἰς διασκήσειν. The word signifies a witness also. For when they warned any to the Tribunall, they had any that stood by to testify that they had admonished them. <sup>b</sup> Κλητῆρες ὅ δὲ καλῶντες εἰς τὴν διασκήσειν πάντας σημαίνει ὅ ἢ λέξις ἢ ἢ μάρτυρα. You may use κλητῆρ for an Apparator, Sergeant, Bailiffe, or the like. Sometimes they would run streight to the Court, as it were headlong, in <sup>c</sup> Demosthenes his phrase, sometimes the Suiter would forthwith draw the Defendant, if he were loath to come, as you may see out of <sup>c</sup> Aristophanes, καὶ θ' ἔειπεν αὐτὸν. But if the party could put in two ἀξιώχειας, sufficient baile, he was dismissed. Hence in the <sup>d</sup> Comœdian. Ἀλλ' ἐγγυητὰς σικκατασίσω δὲ Λεξιόχειας I will procure thee a couple of able sureties. Sometimes they would appoint a day of appearance, that might be a weeke or more, after the vocationem in jus, at which time if the Defendant were not personally at the Judgement seat, he came within compass of Ερήμια a Writ of Exemodicium, refusall to come in and answer. Which was avoided by suing for a μὴ ἔσται in tenne daies after. For when the party to defend was absent, hee was condemned indictâ causâ, so <sup>e</sup> Budæus expounds ἐξ ἐρήμιας καταδικασθῆναι, by this therefore the case was renewed, and stood as at first, the sentence that before past, being made of no force; and for this was it termed μὴ ἔσται, ε ὅπ πρῶτον δοκῶσα εἶδ' ἢ κεκυρῶσθαι, ὕστερον εἰς τὸ αὐτὸ εἶδ' ἀπέσιτατο, because in the beginning it seemed to carry some power, but at last was nothing. The businesse then made a new, the party that was cast by an ἐρήμια, after that he had obtained a μὴ ἔσται, was <sup>h</sup> within two Moneths to set the Law on foot, which they terme ἀππλαχθῆναι διὰ νόμου, or else the sentence given before was ratified. Whosoever should offer to call any man to the Court, unless upon good grounds, was liable to  $\psi\delta\delta\kappa\lambda\eta\tau\iota\alpha\varsigma\ \delta\iota\kappa\eta$ , a writ of molestation for a false cause. Having thus far proceeded, the Impleader gave in a Libell, which held contents of his action, and the summe of the defendants answer. This the Greeks call <sup>a</sup>  $\text{Αντιγραφῶν}$ , Antigraphen. Though I know also that all cases in law were termed <sup>b</sup>  $\text{αεζύματα, κἀντιγραφαί}$ . They tooke this course because the Defendant might know what to answer. And because it was ordinary in Athens for knaves to accuse out of envy, which is,  $\text{συνοργανία}$ , they made a Law, that whosoever accused and had not the fifth part of the voices should be fined a thousand Drachmes. And he that could not prove his objections was also punished in the purse a certain summe; <sup>d</sup> which if he paid not at the constituted time, was fourfold; And if his ability reached not so far, he suffered imprisonment. At the presenting of the Antigraphē, testimonies were also delivered, (formes of which you shall often meet with in <sup>c</sup> Demosthenes) & a copy of an oath, which the Suiter gave, in these words <sup>f</sup>  $\text{Ταληθῆ καταγορήσειν}$ , that he would justly accuse.  $\text{Ταληθῆ ἀπολογήσασθαι}$ , that he would according to truth make his Apologie; and this they name <sup>e</sup>  $\text{ἀντωμοσίαν}$ . These writings were cast into a certain coffer, forth coming as occasion should require; all which <sup>h</sup> Aristophanes in one verse comprehends,  $\text{ἀντωμοσίας κὶ περσολήσεις κὶ ὑρτυείας σωμακόλων}$ . They joyned or put together oaths, citations, & testimonies. I so interpret it against the Scholiasts minde, who will have,  $\text{περσολήσεις}$  to be exhortations given to the Plantiffe and Defendant to come to composition. But I know that <sup>i</sup>  $\text{περσολήσεις}$  is  $\text{κατηγόρησις, εἰς δικασήσιον ἔλκειν}$ , to accuse, injns rapere, <sup>k</sup> and  $\text{περσολήσεις, διὰ ὑρτύρων ἀποχθήσεις}$ . The chest or coffer was called  $\text{ἐχίνος}$ , and of this are the words of the Greeke Oratours to be understood <sup>l</sup>  $\text{εἰς ἐχίνον ἐβάλλειν}$  <sup>m</sup> Theophrastus of a mad man that would entangle himselfe in any thing,  $\text{ἔχων ἐχίνον ἐν τῷ σπασκαλίῳ, κὶ ὄρμαθὺς γεσμιμαπιδίων ἐν ταῖς χερσίν}$ . Having an Echinus in his lap, and a bundle of libells in his hands. Pollux makes a different exposition of his oath from that that which other Grammaticians doe, confounding, is most probable, the ἑπιδικασίαι and ἀπονομία with ἀπονομία. For ἀπονομία is that first oath which the Plaintiff gave to prosecute, the party prosecuted to answer, which on the defendants side was called ἀπονομία, and generally on both. Διανομία was a Sacrament taken by both, the Impleader that he did ἀπεξέστη δίκην, follow the delinquent in law; the Defendant ὡς οὐ ἔπρεξεν ἀποδικαίνω, to stand listly to it that he did not trespass. And yet Ulpian makes both these one. After this were they that sued one another admitted to the Judicatory, it being first demanded of the Suiter whether he would persequi, follow the suit, and had sufficient witness for evidence; in causes capitall it was asked if there were need of any, who could not then be present. This interrogation was termed Ἀνακρίσις. If then any thing was deficient the judgement was prorogued by an ἑπιδικασίαι, or oath, which the Plantiffe took, that for the present he could not perform it, but certainly would. Perhaps for that time pretending sicknesse, death of friends, or some urgent necessity, on which their fortunes might depend. When then all things were ready, and at hand, they proceeded towards the Tribunal, the Judges first swearing that they would give sentence according to the Laws, and in those things concerning which there were no Laws, according to conscience and equity ( which the Greeks call νόμον δικαιοσύνης ) and of those things only concerning which they did debate. This oath seems to have been taken at the Altar, from whence they brought their little stones ( of these by and by ) with which they gave sentence. Plutarch. Ἰστορίων βιβλίον ἑβδόμητον. The oath is called ἀπονομία. Then went the Judges to their seats, neatly spread with mats, in Greeke, κλίστρα, and κλίστρας, and all others being warned by the Præco, to goe without the Bars, in this forme μὴ τισιν ἐξέσθαι they sat down. For we must know that the Athenian Judicatories were environed in, as the Romans with lettice I suppose, by them

Sometimes the witness was not present at the doing of the wrong, but took it from others by hear-say, which the Greek Lawyers terme,  $\alpha\kappa\omicron\upsilon\alpha\varsigma$   $\alpha\kappa\omicron\upsilon\alpha\ \tau\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\delta\omicron\pi\kappa\omicron\tau\omicron\upsilon$ , when they take from those that are dead, which went for current, and was allowable: But to bring a testimony from the Mouth of one that was alive, and within the territories of Athens, it would not passe. As neither theirs who were discarded the liberties of the City,  $\alpha\pi\omicron\mu\omicron\iota$ ; or servants, or any man in his owne cause. The manner of witness was twofold, either by personall appearance and testifying  $\omega\tau\omicron\pi\epsilon\sigma\sigma\omega\pi\omega\varsigma$ , and then he was called  $\omega\delta\omicron\pi\omega\varsigma$ , in no case lyable to the Law,  $\kappa\omicron\iota\delta\iota\kappa\omicron$ ; or else by writing, by which he offered himselfe to his questions or attachments in Law, against whom he witnessed; if he were not true; and this is  $\omega\delta\omicron\tau\epsilon\iota\alpha$ . Both parties being heard, and the altercation ceased, the Præco cried, To whom E. N. hath seemed to violate right (so they interpret  $\alpha\delta\iota\kappa\alpha\iota\upsilon$ , jus violare) let him cast in the black stone, or hollow, to whom he seemeth not, the whole or white. For we must know that anciently the Greeks gaveth their sentences with black and white pebles, called  $\chi\omicron\iota\epsilon\iota\upsilon\alpha$  (which the French semblably terme Procellaines,  $\chi\omicron\iota\upsilon\alpha$  porcus)<sup>d</sup> Ovid.

The antique fashion was with white stones to absolve, with black to condemne the accused. Pertinent to which is the saying of Alcibiades, when he was called out of Sicilie to go home and answer for his life, counting it foolish to goe thither, whence he never was like to escape; when one asked  $\epsilon\pi\iota\sigma\tau\epsilon\iota\varsigma\ \tau\eta\ \pi\alpha\tau\epsilon\iota\delta\iota\ \tau\omega\ \alpha\pi\omicron\delta\epsilon\ \epsilon\pi\iota\sigma\iota\upsilon$ , Wilt thou not trust thy country which begat thee to be thy Judge?  $\text{O}\upsilon\delta\epsilon\ \tau\eta\ \mu\eta\tau\epsilon\iota\delta\iota$ ; quoth hee,  $\Delta\epsilon\delta\omicron\mu\alpha\ \gamma\delta\ \mu\eta\ \alpha\gamma\gamma\omicron\upsilon\sigma\alpha\ \eta\ \sigma\phi\alpha\lambda\epsilon\iota\sigma\alpha\ \tau\delta\ \alpha\lambda\eta\theta\epsilon\varsigma$ ,  $\tau\omega\ \mu\epsilon\gamma\alpha\lambda\alpha\ \nu\epsilon\mu\beta\alpha\lambda\eta\alpha\upsilon\ \tau\eta\ \sigma\lambda\omicron\upsilon\eta\varsigma\ \psi\eta\phi\omicron\upsilon$ . No not her, that brought me forth. For I feare lest (hee being ignorant, and not conceiving the truth, mistake the black for the white stone. The black made tristem sententiam, and was so named; the sad-sentence, the white candidam or acquitting. They used likewise black and white beans; in respect of which Pythagoras is thought to have spoken a riddle, κυνάμους μὴ ἐθίειν, not to eat beans, by Nonnus interpreted μὴ περὶ βιβίου τας τὸ δίχαιον ἀποδοῦν καὶ τὸς χεῖμασι. Not to undermine justice with bribes; or that men should get by the perverting of equity. I see no reason, but that I may think he means men ought not to be forward in getting places of Judgement. For κυνάμους in Aristophanes is by the Scholiast expounded δικαίτης and κυνάμους τρώχων is used for a Judge, which properly signifies an eater of beans. But after wards they had little pellets of brasse: The bloody ones of them were pierced through, therefore termed, πεντυπιμύλαι, the saving were whole, ἀτυπυί. Of these every one took of each other from the Altar, as I have said, <sup>e</sup> where laying their hands upon the ψήφους, or balls, they intimated by a transposition of them (as from the black to the white, and from the white to the black againe) that they would not for envy or by-respects, but indifferently and truly judge. When then they were ready to passe sentence <sup>f</sup> the Præco carried about the Κάδον or Καδύσκον, a certaine pitcher (for so Xenophon calls it, ὕδριον) having on the mouth of it a conveyance like a Tunnell, named κηνός, but the top thereof was covered close, except a little hole for one pellet at a time to be put in, made for avoiding of deceit, I suppose, lest one man might cast in more; and therefore were they to touch the ψήφους, only with the forefinger, middle, and thumb. <sup>h</sup> Aristoph. Τὲς τρεῖς λαπέχων ἤδ' ἀκτύλων ἀνίσταθ'. But we must know that the blacke and white pellets were not promiscuously cast into one pot, but two; <sup>i</sup> The one which freed was made of brasse, called σέτερον, whether because they first threw into it their voices, or because it may signifie the better, I know not; The other that condemned, being wodden wodden  $\sigma\tau\epsilon\phi$ . After the Crier had gone round with both because some would keep their bals, and for favour not give their voice against a friend or great person, therefore he cried,  $\tau\omicron\iota\varsigma\ \alpha\gamma\chi\eta\tau\iota\varsigma\ \alpha\gamma\iota\sigma\iota\delta\omega$ , Who hath not cast in his ball? let him rise. So he rose and threw it in. Then they took them out and numbered them; and in matter of lands, mony or the like, whose vessell (for there were as many set as the number of the litigants came to) had most; got the upper hand. At the counting of them a Magistrate stood by with a rod, and laid it over those that were told, lest they should mistake the one from the other, or wittingly doe it. For so were they wont to doe; thence named  $\psi\upsilon\phi\omicron\kappa\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\omega$ . Which Tencer objects to Menelaus about Ajax, when by his deceit the armour was given to Ulysses; and therefore hee calls him  $\kappa\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\pi\tau\omega\ \psi\upsilon\phi\omicron\kappa\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\omega$ . Sch.  $\theta\epsilon\lambda\iota\omicron\nu\ \chi\rho\iota\tau\acute{\iota}\omega$  not amisse,  $\psi\upsilon\phi\omicron\kappa\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\pi\tau\omega$ .

 ¶ When the number was knowne, if the white or solid bals, were more, they tooke their tables which they had in their hands, and drew a short line, as a token of absolution; if the black or hollow were more, they drew a longer line, as condemning. Hence  $\acute{\alpha}\pi\iota\sigma\iota\ \pi\eta\mu\acute{\omega}\nu\ \mu\alpha\kappa\rho\acute{\omega}\nu$ , may be used, for to condemne every body. The thing it selfe they termed  $\theta\acute{\alpha}\lambda\omicron\kappa\iota\zeta\eta\varsigma$  Aristophanes. By this the one party being overthrown (as none ever was without the sentence of the Judges) his adversary wrote down what damages hee should pay, which they terme  $\epsilon\pi\iota\gamma\epsilon\delta\phi\epsilon\upsilon\iota$ . h Plutarch.  $\delta\acute{\epsilon}\kappa\alpha\ \tau\acute{\alpha}\lambda\alpha\upsilon\tau\alpha\ \pi\iota\upsilon\mu\mu\alpha\ \acute{\epsilon}\kappa\acute{\alpha}\sigma\eta\ \pi\eta\delta\ \delta\iota\kappa\acute{\omega}\nu\ \epsilon\pi\iota\gamma\epsilon\delta\phi\epsilon\upsilon\iota\ \mu\acute{\alpha}\lambda\omega\theta$ .
 ¶ For it was a use of old for those that went to Law to make agreements: I know not whether by oath, for they did swear by three Gods,  $\text{I}\kappa\acute{\iota}\sigma\tau\iota\omicron\nu$ ,  $\text{K}\alpha\ \delta\acute{\alpha}\rho\tau\iota\omicron\nu$ ,  $\text{E}\xi\alpha\kappa\alpha\sigma\tau\acute{\iota}\epsilon\iota\omicron\nu$ , and put it into the Echinus, that they would stand to such and such conditions, before sentence, that he that was cast should undergoe somewhat; and afterwards  $\epsilon\pi\iota\gamma\epsilon\delta\phi\epsilon\upsilon\iota$ , that is set down what losse of limbs or life; or meanes, &c. For although they did  $\kappa\acute{\epsilon}\nu\epsilon\chi\upsilon\ \epsilon\phi\acute{\alpha}\zeta\epsilon\delta\alpha\iota$  give their estates as pledges to answer and meet at the Court; yet it may be that might be lesse or more than the fine. in causes capitall or other proceeding, like to that in the City of Venice; where they gave two sentences. In the first they determined whether they should condemne or free ; If in the first he was condemned, the manner of punishment was ordained in the second. But if in the first they found no cause of death, they bad the accused to fine himsefe, which <sup>b</sup> Xenophon intimates by ἰσοτιμίαν, and if it were too little the Iudges doubtlesse made it more, as the Scholiasft of Aristophanes, if I forget not : The custome is set downe by <sup>c</sup> Cicero, speaking of Socrates. Ergo ille quoq̄, damnatus est, &c. And he too was condemned, not only by the first suffrages, but also by those which by the appointment of the Lawes they were to give the second time. For in Athens the accused being found guilty, if the offence were not capitall, they weighed and considered the penalty. When the sentence was to be given by the Iudges, they asked the defendant, what hee thought himsefe to have deserved to forfeit, &c. (In the Venetian Commonwealth this is not observed.) In tryall if there be more for the prisoners liberty, then against him, he is strait acquitted, but if more then halfe be in the pot of condemnation he suffers. <sup>d</sup> Socrates at the first had two hundred eighty and one more against him, then on his side; and at the next eighty more were added to the former, so in all he had three hundred threescore and one condemnatory suffrages. But fewer might have done as much. For we read in <sup>e</sup> Demosthenes of Cimon like to be punished with death, ὅσα πλείους ἢ τρεῖς ἑκατὸν, if three had not been wanting. And againe, <sup>f</sup> πλείους ἢ μόνον ἡσθεὶς διδόντων τὸ μὴ δαίνεσθαι πύλαις. Nay one was sufficient, <sup>g</sup> Demosthenes. Μία μόνον ἀδυναστεύω. But Ulpian on the place, ὡς τε μὴ ἐξὶν δίδόναι πύλαις, saies, that hee was lightly punished. <sup>h</sup> If the voices were equali, then was the prisoner loosed; because sometimes he might be accused upon suspicion, or of those things which he did not willingly commit, or perhaps was sued out of envy, and many other reasons given by <sup>i</sup> Aristotle : therefore did the Lawgiver leave leave some place for pity and compassion. To which the Judges were often moved. And therefore would they plead the deserts of their ancestors; their own lives formerly well led. <sup>b</sup> Sometimes shewed they their wounds; and brought the venerable gray haire of their parents, but <sup>c</sup> mothers chiefly, to intercede in silence: Sometimes embracing their children in their armes, they held them up in the Judges view; or caused them to <sup>d</sup> come up into the βήμα or pulpit, & supplicate with teares; which wrought so much upon the Judges, that <sup>e</sup> Aristophanes in a scoffe presents one Σποδαρχεταν πικρὸν γούλιον, drowing his sentence in weeping. Then in compunction would the Judges speak to the prisoner, <sup>f</sup> Κατιβα, κατιβα, wishing him to go down from the βήμα, a token often of mercy; though now and then it proved otherwise. Nay it was a word of displeasure too, as when Plato would have been Advocate for Socrates. Νεωτάτος ὢν, ὡ ἀνδρες Ἀθωῶνιοι, ἥ ὅτι τὸ βήμα ἀναβάντων, they thundred out, Κατιβάντων τῶν τῶν κατὰ ἔση. Neither may I forget <sup>g</sup> Amyntas the brother of Aeschylus the Tragædian, who, when the people would have stoned his brother for some impiety brought on the stage, held up his elbow and arme without a hand, lost in the fight at Salamis: by which spectacle the Judges calling to minde the merits of Amyntas, dismissed the Poet. Neither may I omit what <sup>h</sup> Xenophon objects to them, that they cared not so much for justice, as regarded what might conduce most to their own profit, and be convenient: And that they condemned innocents, and spared offenders that could speak well. Furthermore another fault of theirs was the prolonging of cases a whole yeare, saies <sup>k</sup> Xenophon, and <sup>l</sup> Aristophanes. Ἀλλ' ἔτι γὰρ τὰς ὑπερξικνοντέρας Εἰσαγγελίαι, ἀλλ' εἰσαυθίς ἀναβελόμεθα. Now we doe not handle suits of above three-score yeares, but we are put off unill the next day. Τὰς ἐνθὺς εἰκοσιν ἢ ἐκ τριῶν ἡμερῶν. For wee come to triall within twenty yeares. This Xenophon imputes to the multitude of their imployments. As long as the case hung in suspense, the name of

CAP. III. SECT. II.

De Areopago, & ejus appellatione. Areopagite.

ON the hill, on which the Acropolis was built, stood the Areopagus, in the old translation of the Acts of the Apostles rendred Vicus Martius, by our Englishmen, Mars his Street, Falsly. For πύργος beares not that signification, but what <sup>f</sup> Justin Martyr interprets, ὁ ὕψυλος πύργος, an eminent place. Ἐν δ' ὄρθῳ πνιῶ ἐκεῖνο τὸ διασήμεον. For that Judiciary was on a high rock. Therefore named by <sup>e</sup> Aeschylus, & <sup>h</sup> Enripides, Ἀρεῖος ὄρθος, by <sup>i</sup> Ovid, Scopulus Mavortis, and <sup>k</sup> Ennius, Areopagica petra: so called, as fond Antiquities would have it, <sup>l</sup> from the judgement of the twelve Gods upon Mars, for killing Halirrhothius the sonne of Neptune. But <sup>m</sup> Justin Martyr, because he was there arraigned of advoutery, ὡι χείρας ἐκέτισε δίκας ἔδωκεν, But alike true. It pleases mee well to consider the superstition of the Ancients, that consecrated high places to their deities, and erected the statues of their Gods upon hills. As <sup>n</sup> Parnes, Hymettus, Ache/mus, comes from πύργος. Because built neare a well. whence whence Jupiter Parnethius, Hymettius, Anchesmius. And as in Athens, Neptune had a hill Ποσειδώνος πάρος, Saturne another, Κρόνου πάρος. Pan another, Πανός πάρος. Mercury another, Ερμῆος πάρος, so Mars his Areopagus. <sup>a</sup> Æschylus gives it a nomination from the Amazons, sacrificing to Mars there, when they came and fought against Theseus. Or if you will receive the opinion of others, it takes the name from the cases in it handled, of blood wilfully shed: so Hesychius, Ἀρεῖος φονητός. That when <sup>b</sup> Juvenal calls it Curtiam Martis, you may interpret it, The Court of murder, but willingly committed. This is termed by the <sup>c</sup> Tragedian, the most uncorrupt, sharp, reverend council, then which nothing is more constant (saies <sup>d</sup> Tully, comparing to it the Roman Senate) nothing more severe, as by <sup>e</sup> Pseudo Dithys Cretensis, it is stiled Judicium severissimum per omnem Graciam. Then which none judged better, more just, or honest, saies <sup>f</sup> Xenophon. & Plutarch writes that this Court was ordained by Solon, and <sup>g</sup> Cicero received the like opinion; but that seems to contradict it, which Plutarch presently brings, quoted in the thirteenth table, that they who had lost their liberties should be restored again, unless they were condemned by the Areopagites, Epheta, Prytanes, Basileis, of murder, slaughter, tyranny, when that Law was enacted. And by and by, <sup>h</sup> Τίνας δὲ ἦσαν οἱ πρὸ Σόλωνος, &c. Who were condemned in Areopagus before Solons time (if he first instituted the Areopagites.) <sup>i</sup> Others are of opinion, that Solon added the Areopagites to the Epheta (Judges so called, because when formerly the Basileis made inquisition after murder unwillingly committed, Draco made it ἐβέβαιον, that is, translated it to the Epheta, their number was but fifty one. And though they judged in five Courts once, yet by little & little they became ridiculous.) <sup>j</sup> Possardus saies, he abolished their severity, and substituted the Areopagites. But <sup>k</sup> Urbo Emmissus more probably, that Solon was not the Author of this Senate, but brought it into a better forme, made it more strong and firme; and augmented the power of it. For Draco it seemes

Priest of all that asked every of their sentences, took the suffrages. Their authority was unlimited. For<sup>a</sup> they were overseers of all, <sup>b</sup> Judges of wilfull murders, wounds given out of pretended malice; which would make some, having a desire to drive a man out of Athens, go to a Chyrurgion and make an incision in their heads, that they might sue him who they hated, upon an action of battery, as<sup>c</sup> Mantitheus against Bæotus. They fate upon incendiaries and imprisoners, if the party dyed that tooke their doses. <sup>d</sup>They saw that the Laws should be put in execution; such as Contareni would have in Venice to be guardians of their Statutes. <sup>e</sup>In a word all great delinquencies came under their censures. They inquired into the behaviours of men; and we read in Xenophon that they sharply reproved a young man for his loose living, Ανακαλεσάμενοι αὐτὸν ἔσ' Ἀρειοπαγῶν, &c. saies the Dipnosophist. <sup>f</sup>Valerius Maximus. Est & eiusdem urbis <sup>g</sup>h sanctissimum consilium Arcopagus. &c. There is likewise in that City the most sacred Councell Arcopagus, where they were wont most diligently to enquire, what either the Athenians did, by what gaine he maintained himself, and what his trade and actions were. That men, knowing and remembring that once they must give an account of their lives, might imbrace honesty. <sup>i</sup>The Greek author tells us that except in great cases of necessity they medled not with state affaires, but it seemes otherwise. For if any one say, quoth <sup>k</sup>Tully, that the Attick Republique can be well governed, without the councill of the Arcopagites, he may as well say that the world may be governed without the providence of the Gods. When the Medes and Persians invaded Greece, <sup>l</sup>by the advice of them was the war waged, wherein Themistocles purchased an everlasting memory of a victory. <sup>m</sup>And when their publike Treasurie was bare, they furnished each man with eight Drachmes, and stored the ships with Mariners. Which advice, when they had won the day, was a cause, saies <sup>n</sup>Aristotle, ἑωρτέον ποιεῖσαι τὴν πάλειαν, to give strength and sinewes to the Commonwealth. Under their sight were all the youth of Athens. For this reason especially, because that when they were reckoned among men, and were come to age, they needed more care to be had of them, than when they were children; not observed by our countrymen in sending their sons young to the Innes of Courts) youth and heat of blood, unstaidness in judgement, rashness in adventures, and proneness to vice, leading, or rather carrying headlong tender yeares to their owne destruction. To them appertained blasphemies against their Gods, violating of religion, and divulging mysteries, as when <sup>b</sup> Euryclides the Hierophanta in answer to the question of Theodorus, Τίνας εἰσὶν οἱ ἀσεβῆτες περὶ τὰ μυστήρια, who offended against the mysteries? Οἱ τοῖς ἀμυήταις αὐτὰ ἐκφίεσσιτες, replied, such as open them to those who are not initiated. Therefore, quoth the Philosopher, art thou impious. For which crime, had not Demetrius Phalerensis befriended him, the Hierophanta was in danger, εἰς Ἀρείου ἀνάχθῃναι πάλιν, to have been brought before the Councell of Areopagus. By vertue of which authority S. Paul was here judged for teaching strange Gods (as they supposed.) For although that the Athenians were under the Romans, yet their Lords made them αὐτῶν νόμος, sui juris, and permitted them to keep their ancient customes. The manner or proceeding in this Court, was thus. After the felony committed, the appellant brought his inditement to the Basilens, who giving the prisoner and his accuser audience once a month, at three severall times to debate the businessse, in the fourth month, brings in the accusation to the Areopagites, and putting off the crown which he was wont to wear, sat down as judge with the Areopagites in the dark: for they judged by night, saies <sup>c</sup> Lucian, that they might not regard the speaker, but what was spoken. It being there forbidden <sup>d</sup> ἄποσινα δέχεσθαι καὶ ὀκνηθῆναι to move to compassion, and use Proems, as in other Courts, wherein they craved the Judges favour and attention, which by Demosthenes are termed <sup>e</sup> παραγῶρες.  in affinity to the slaine man; <sup>d</sup> which if he were not, he could not prosecute, the Law forbidding. The reason why he stood ἐπὶ τῶν κλέων, I suppose is, because they are the instruments of generation, and in that oath, if he were not true, he wished an extirpation of his house, himself, and his posterity. In which if he were perjured, he was liable to the punishment, as a-he accounts among his children; the party so offending might be slain in the manner by him, against whom he had trespassed. Likewise, in the defence of a mans goods, if the thiefe were killed, impunity was granted. After this inquisition, they passed to sentence, which was given very privily, as Juvenal intimates, Ergo occulta teges, ut curia Martis Athenis; without speaking (as the Tabellares sententia of the Romans, in which they wrot C. if they condemned. A. if absolved. N. L. if the case were not manifest) hence Ἀρειοπαγίτης σερανώτερος, for one that is close and silent; and Ἀρειοπαγίτης, for one that is grave, and who can hold his peace, & in whose countenance is <sup>a</sup> tristis severitas, ἐπὶ ἧσ' κλυθρωπῶν καὶ ὑπερσμενῶν καὶ σιωπηλῶν.

Whatsoever they concluded of, stood irrecoverable, <sup>b</sup> neither could there be any appeal to another Tribunal. And no marvell. For so upright was their sentence, that none, either Appellant or prisoner could ever say, that he was unjustly condemned. Nay both parties, as well those that are cast, as they that cast, are alike contented, <sup>d</sup> ἡπλωμένοι σεργασίῳ ὁμοίως πύκνωσεν τὴν κρίσιν. After doom the prisoner was to suffer death.

In which execution also the Arcopagites had a care lest the innocent should be punished with the guilty. When therefore they had condemned a woman for poysoning another, they deferred the execution, because shee was great with childe, and strait way after her delivery put the mother to death. Which custome is by us also observed at our Assises.

It will not be amisse to relate one memorable thing done in the time of Dolabella Proconsul of Asia, who, when a dame of Smyrna was brought before him, for killing her husband and son, who had deprived her of a hopefull youth, begot of her by a former husband, referred the audience of the matter to the Arcopagites, who commanded the woman and her accuser to appear some hundred yeares after; that by such a bottom of time, scarce able to be unwinded, they might shew, that neither would condemne nor acquit the woman. One thing more; <sup>e</sup> Quintilian tells us, that they condemned a boy for for putting out the eyes of Quales. Because it was a sign of a minde, likely to prove most pernicious. Their power was shaken and somewhat pluckt downe by <sup>b</sup> Ephialtes, a fore enemy of Oligarchical government, and more enclining to the people, who was secretly slain by <sup>c</sup> Aristodickus of Tanagra. Here was Demopho first tried, who returning from this battell, killed with his horse, somewhat diverting, an Athenian; for whose kined some thinke he satisfied the Law, or generally for the Argivi. <sup>b</sup> If any had stricken a man or woman, and the party chanced to dye, he was judged in this Court. <sup>i</sup> In such cases the Law was very favourable; for the party offending was not punished with perpetuall exile, ἀποουσία, as in wilfull felony; (kept by us in England once, called Abjuration,

And the Scholiast of Sophocles tells us that <sup>πρωὴ</sup> is spoken only, <sup>ἐπὶ καταβολῆς χρημάτων</sup> of payment of mony, but abusively of any punishment. <sup>δ</sup> If the party wounded had forgiven the offender before his death, or the allies of the man desperately hurt, none could afterwards compell him to flye; otherwise hee fled. And in that flight he betook himselfe to some acquaintance, by whom he was cleansed from the guilt with certain ceremonies of washing, which the Romans call Februa. This manner was done with water, as you may read, taken out of the well Hippocrene, made by the foot of Pegasus; the sprinkling was with a little bough of Lawrell, as I suppose by the words following perswaded to it; which tell us, that when the καθάρσιαι were buried, there sprouted out of them a Bay tree and after that καθαίρειν, ὄσπαι καὶ καθαρθῶσαι. This as I said was in his sight, καπνὸν ὄσπιν καὶ καθαίρειν νομίμως ποί. The proceeding in this Court, was first, διδωμοσία, such as before I mentioned, an oath in each party, accuser and defendant: secondly, λόγος, their speeches of both sides: thirdly, γνώσις δικάσειν, Judgement. De Judiciis, ἐν Δελφίνῳ Περὶ παρτίφ. Φρεαπίοι.

AT Athens there was a Temple erected by Aegens (who lived in Delphinium) to the honor of Apollo Delphinium and Diana Delphinia, where was the Tribunal named ἐν Δελφίνῳ, or ἐπὶ Δελφίνῳ δικάσειον. * In this Iudicatory were heard cases of murder, when the party confessed the fact, but pleaded that it was legitimate. <sup>c</sup> For the Law required no punishment of any man that should kill another taking him committing adultery with his Wife, or uncleanness with his Mother, Sister, Daughter, Concubine, or free Children. Likewise if in preservation of his goods, or own defence he spilt blood it was not capitall. The first that was arraigned here was Theseus, maintaining the right he had to slay the thieves, saies <sup>d</sup> Pollux (I know not whether hee mean Sciron and Procrustes &c.) and Pallas with his children, who were rebels. soever had slain any body was compelled to flye the country, or staying dye, were the cause never so just. Ἐν Πρυτανίῳ. Here they sate on things inanimate. As if a stone, timber, iron, or such like, fall on a man, and kill him, if the party that slung this be not knowne, sentence was past on that thing which slew him; and the ῥυλοβασιλεῖς, that were the Masters of this court, were to see this thing cast out of the Territories of Athens, to which Ἐσχίνης alludes, Τὰ μὲν ξύλα καὶ πῦλινθες, καὶ τὰ σίδνερα τὰ ἄφανα, καὶ ἀγνώμινα ἕαντινα ἐμποσόντα ἀποκλείειν ἕσθαι ζῶντα. The first thing that here was judged was an Axe, wherewith the Priest, whom they call Βερόν, had slain an Oxe on the altar of Jupiter Polieus in the time of Erethens. Ἐν φρεατῶν. In that part of Piræum which is next the Sea, is a place which they name φρεατῆς, from Phreatus an Heros, some think; not because it stood in a pit, whence Pollux names it ἔν φρεάται. Here they were judged who having fled out of another country for unwillfull murder, ἄμπερ ἢς ἐκκαλύπταν αὐτὸν ἡθεσμῶσαν, they that drove him out not acquitting him, if in the space of his exile it happened that he wittingly slew another, he answered heer. The proceeding was in this sort. The Judges assembled in φρεατῶν, in a place seated on the Sea, ἑπί τοις ἐπικαλύμνον ἐπιθαλάσσιον; where the guilty drawing near in a boat or bark, was to make his apology, τὴ γῆς ἄπο ἀπομύνη; not comming to land or touching it, neither casting anchor for mooring his bark; and if he were found guilty he underwent deserved punishment: If he were not found guilty they cleared him of that fact, not discharging him of the former, ἢ πῶς ἔπι αὐτέρῳ φόνου φονῆς ὑπέχει. I know not whether I may be of that opinion that others are in this, that if he were cast in this tryall, he was exposed to the cruell mercy of the wind and waves. These last quoted words seem to contradict it. The first that ever answered here was Tencer, proving himselfe to be innocent of the death of Ajax; ἢ whom treacherously circumvented because he defended not his father Telamon drove out of

Of this name there were two, ἄδικον μείζον καὶ μέσον, the greater and the middle. In this Court were handled matters, saies Petit, that exceeded not one drachme, to which Aristotle might be thought to looke speaking of Iudicatories, περὶ ἧν μικρῶν συναλλαγμάτων, ὅσα δραχμῶναι, &c. And this was the meaning of Pausanias, Ἐπὶ ἐλαχίστοις σωμαίωντων, εἰς αὐτὸ. Suing here for the least occasions. The Undecimviri were Iudges of the Court, which made Petit to suppose that it was not to be reckoned among the δέκα δικασήσια. The Scholiast of Aristophanes writes that this noble Lycus had a Temple neare the Judicatory, where the Judges divided their money for pay, three oboli, to each, a day. ἡ μισθία δικαστήριον. This was a great Judicatory, so named from Metichus an artificer, which built it. Here, who had passed thirty yeares of his age, and was well and nobly descended, and owed nothing to the publique treasury, might be chosen Judge. For of such they all consisted. Ἐν Ἀρδύλλῳ. Some have falsely supposed that there was a Tribunall so called; neither did Memnius think otherwise, when he translated these words of Pollux, ἐν Ἀρδύλλῳ δικαστήριον, apud tribunal Ardestum. The fault crept in by the negligence of the transcriber; for the place is thus to be read, ἄμισθον ἐν Ἀρδύλλῳ δικαστήριον. The Judicatories were wont to take oath or be sworne in Ardestus. Ardestus is a place near the river Ilissus, so named from Ardestus a Peer, who swore the people, being in sedition and mutinie, to love and amity. Where afterwards, as is most probable, the Judges took oath (I cannot justly say presently after their election) to give sentence according to the Laws, and concerning things to which no Lawes were enacted, in equity and justice, ἢ by Apollo Patrus, Ceres and Jupiter Rex. Thus have we viewed the Athenian Judicatories, in number tenne. For Murther, Arcopagus, Palladium, Delphinium, Prytanæum, and Phreattys. For other matters, Heliaa, Trigonum, Parabystum (not the Medium but Majus) Metichi forum, & ad Lycum, where the Δικασταὶ were wont to sit, saies <sup>c</sup> Possardus, of whom, because <sup>d</sup> Emmius numbers them among Judicia quatuor precipua the four chief Courts, I will now speak. But of every Tribe were chosen <sup>e</sup> forty four men, <sup>f</sup> above threescore yeares old, who judged in severall Tribes, as it fell to them by lot. And if any refused to sit according to his lot, he was deprived of the privileges of an Athenian Citizen. <sup>g</sup> In former time there came no controversie into the Courts, which had not first past through their hands (if it exceeded tenne drachmes. Although <sup>h</sup> Ulpian tells us that they determined of petty businesses) but that seems to be, ἢ ἐν ἱερίαις, holy matters, if Pollux be so to be read. For some things there were which came not under their jurisdiction. What ever the δικασταὶ κληρωτῆ judged, if the Plaintiffe and Defendant, or either of them liked not the award, they might referre it to the Senate (as appeares out of the <sup>i</sup> Argument of Demosth. Orat. contra Callippum, & <sup>k</sup> Pollux) at which removing of the suit they were to cast their suffrages into a pot as they gave them on what side soever, for the Plaintiffe by themselves, and for the Defendant by themselves. <sup>l</sup> When they were appointed for the hearing of a case, they were to meet at the place for them ordained, there to expect both parties untill the even, at which time if neither, or but one was present, it was in their power to fine them according to the Law. At the time they entred the suit, and wrot the accusation, with the fine which was required for damages; they received as a fee from the Plaintiff one drachme, which they called <sup>a</sup> δάσμων, as also another from the defendant, when they gave him his oath. The office was but annual: And because they would pervert justice, (as <sup>b</sup> Demosthenes is witness, * although they were not to judge before they had sworn) give sentence according to favour, envy, or for gain; therefore <sup>c</sup> at the yeares end they made an account of their function upon the last day of <sup>d</sup> Thargelion, on which it was lawfull for any to speak what he could object against them; and if any were faulty, they were <sup>e</sup> ἀπυοι. Thus much of the Δικαστῆται Κληρονομοί. There were other Δικαστῆται likewise, such as our Civilians call Arbitri compromissarii; and we in English Arbitrators: whom two parties choose with a resolution to stand to their determination; whether in matter of debt, covenant, or other controversie soever. Such by the Attick law any might request, but with a necessity of abiding at their judgement. <sup>e</sup> For they could not appeal from them to any other court. To referre matters to their arbitrement, the Greeks terme, ἐπιπέμπειν δίκασιν. And it will not be superfluous here to relate the story of Bunas an Athenian, whom when the Elei and Calydonii had chosen arbitrator in a difference, after he had heard both parties, he prolonged the sentence untill at last he died. Whence it grew to a proverb, <sup>f</sup> Bunas δικάζει, Bunas judicat, Bunas judgeth, of those that defer to passe sentence, and hold a case long in suspense.

Recip. Ath. p. 48

HAVING thus treated of the Attick Courts, it follows that I speake of their Terms of Law, Writs, and Accusations. These were of two sorts, private and publique. The publique were properly termed Κατηγορία, saies <sup>g</sup> Emmins. Of Κατηρειῶν, there were divers forts. Γραφή, φάσις, ἐνδειξις, ἀπαγογή, ἀφίησις, ἀνδραπήγία, ἠσαυελία. Γραφή, saies <sup>a</sup> Ulpian, is ὄσι τ παροβίων, of any trespass against the Law, by which the Statutes of the Commonwealth are violated; and most properly <sup>b</sup> quoth he, elsewhere, it signifies an accusation made a ceording to the Law; or to come nearer, it is the same which in English we call a Writ or Right, in Latine, Actio or Formula, as in <sup>d</sup> Sueton, Injuriarum formulam intendere, to serve a man with a Writ: φάσις is a kinde of an Information made against any for abuses in the Mines, or Custome houses, for converting Tribute mony to a mans owne use, or the like.

 Which offences were brought to the Archon in writing, with the names of the accuser and accused, and the fine which the parties convinced should undergoe, to be paid to him to whom the wrong was offered. But if the Informer had not the fift part of the suffrages, he was to lay downe the sixt part of the fine; which the Orators call ἐπιουσίαν, from ἑξοδός, f Demosthen. because it signifies the sixt part of a Drachme. At the end of the accusation, the informer was to subscribe the names of the witnesses that were present. In generall, all discoveries of private injuries are called φάσις, which in Latine you may name delationes. For which the Romans allotted the fourth part of the forfeit, whence they are stiled Quadruplatores; but among the Athenians not so, if s Pollux say right, καὶ τὸ ἀφί-πται δὲν ἐρίνετο ἢ δὲ ἀδικημάτων, ἢ καὶ ἀλλοῦ ἕκαστου φαίνετον. The amercement fell to the person injured, although another accused for him. If the fine were written down a thousand Drachmes, & the accuser had not the fift part of the voices; he paid two hundred and one Drachme, if it exceeded, a thousand, foure hundred and one. Εἰδειξις is a Writ against those that owe to the City Treasurie, and yet goe about to beare office, saies <sup>b</sup> Ulpian, which by the Attick Law was utterly forbidden. The <sup>c</sup> Scholiast of Aristophanes, takes it for the accusing of any that did amisse in publique affairs; and the

But Pollux teaches us that it is a declaration made to the Archon against one taken in the manner; which the Greeks terme ἐπαυτοῦ ὄρον, <sup>1</sup>Schol. Naxian. ἐπ' αὐτῆ κλοπῆ, Pollux expresses by ὁμολογήσει ἀδικήματα, when the offence is confessed. Because men so apprehended were forced to condemne themselves; no further evidence required then from their own mouths. By which acknowledgement of their guiltinesse, without greater triall, they received their doom; as among us when a prisoner arraigned, confesses his inditement to be true, no twelve men goe upon him; there resteth but the Judges sentence of the paine of death. Whence grew our proverb, Confesse and be hang'd. <sup>d</sup>Pollux ὁμολογήσει ἀδικήματα, ἐκείτως, ἀλλὰ τιμωρίας δεομένης. He that thus made this declaration, was to subscribe his name, that if he were false, he might be liable to the Writ, ἄδεις ἐν σείξιας. The declaration was against men who were not present. Ἀπυζωγὴ, is a carrying of a man before the Magistrate, being taken in the fact, whom otherwise he was to accuse by declaration in his absence. By which a thousand Drachmes were endangered. In this ἀπυζωγῆ, they brought not all offenders to the same Magistrates, but according as they were made Judges of such and such offences; sometimes to the eleven, sometimes to the <sup>1</sup>Thesmotheta, sometimes to the Archon. Now if any man had found out any indebted to the publique treasury, or bound for those places or countries, where it was not permitted for him to go, or one who had committed murder, if by reason of weaknesse he durst not venture to apprehend the person, and ἀπέρχεν, he would perhaps fetch the Archon to the house where such a party lay hid, which the Attisk Lawyers terme ἀενηείδου Ἀνδρολήμον, is when a fellow hath committed murder, and flies for succour to any; (as the Law suffered any to receive him) if the kindred of the slain or others had required the malefactor to be delivered to the, and the protector would not, it was lawfull to enter into his house, and carry away any three persons, as some translate it, or all save three, ἀχι τειῶν, as others, who were to answer for the outrages done. But who so entred unjustly, was not to escape unpunished. Εισαγγελία, saies* Ulpian, is an accusation concerning great and publique matters, such as <sup>b</sup> elsewhere he speaks of, to wit, the dissolution of the Democracie; or if an Orator had spoken what was not for the benefit of the weale-publique, if any went to warres before they were sent, or betrayed a garrison, army, or fleet. In other accusations, if the accuser had not a fift part of the suffrages, he was fined a thousand Drachmes, and lost the priviledges of a Citizen, in this he was uncontrolable. But in after time, because men would accuse presently for none, or small offences; therefore was there a law enacted, that whosoever accused by εἰσαγγελία, and had not the fift part of voices on his side, was fined a thousand Drachmes, although he lost not the priviledges of a Citizen. This εἰσαγγελία contained no written crimes, but was only by bare word of mouth; and as the accusation was given, so was the defence made according to the Law called Εισαγγελητικός. The Senate was βουλή (Pollux saies that Solon made a thousand to sit on this, and Phalereus 1500. Where the interpreter erres. For αὐτὸς πέντε τακόσιαι is 500. to them, as κὲν πέντε, in Demosthenes, and somewhat more) and whom they found delinquent, if in small faults, they fined; but if the offence were heinous, they committed him to prison. Thus much for publique actions; private were these that follow, more properly called δίκαι

Αικίας δ. is an Action against a man, who when two shall scuffle, gives the first blow, which the Greeks call ἕρξαι πληγῶν ἀδικῶν <sup>d</sup> The matter was heard before the Judges; and though the Law ordained not any set summe of money for damages, yet it was permitted for the party smitten to write down what he thought fitting. The reason why these actions were so strictly looked into, was lest any not able to defend himselfe with his hand, should seek to revenge himselfe with stones, or other hurtfull weapon.

For the discharge whereof they are to prove him fit. Επιδικασίας δ. When parents died and left their daughters inheritrices, the kindred was wont to sue each other, to make it appear who was nearest joyned in blood, that he might marry her. Hence a Virgin to whom an inheritance falls, is called ἐπίδικος, that is, Controversa. Μιθώσεως ὄνομα δ. About letting of houses. (For Herodotus termes that ἐκδιδοίμι, which other Greek writers μικθῶμι, it is well to set to hire, as to take rent, ἀμικθῶν and ἐπομικθῶν, to let out. Which they often did for want of mony, which that they might obtaine the quicker, they wrote over their dore as we use to do, Ἐπιθετὸν οὗτοσ ἐστὶν ἐκδοτέον. Which custome Menedemus in Terence expresses-- Inscripti ilico, EDES MERCEDE.) This Writ was properly against Guardians of Orphans (not concerning men of years, such as immediatly is before spoken) who having taken the charge upon them of tuition, were to imploy for the benefit of their Pupils what was left them: they therefore made known to the Archon that such a house was to be let, he then put it out upon some pledge for security. But if the house were let under the yearly rent it could bring in, or was suffered to remaine void of a Tenant, to the losse of a Pupill, then was it lawfull for any man to sue the Guardian in the Arcons court, upon a Writ of Μιθώσεως. Επιθῆπις. I have observed it to have been a custome among the Ancients, when they perceived themselves to draw neare to death, to call for some one, to whose care they would commit their children, and delivering them into their hands, beseech them to have a tender eye over them, and to provide for them, what should be most convenient; such as Oedipus in Sophocles entreats of Thebes in the behalfe of his daughters - Ω φίλον κλέος Δός μοι χεῖρας σῆς πῆσιν ἀσχεῖαν τέλειος, γμήσ τε πῆσες τῶ δὲ καὶ κατάνεσον Μήποτε περδῶσεν τὰς δ' ἐλῶν, τελεῖν δ' ὄσ' αὖ Μίτῆς φρονῶν δ' ξυμφίερον τ' αὐτῆς αἰεί. Not unlike is that of the d Comædian under

But among the Athenians the use was to nominate in their Testaments and last Wills, whom they would have to be Guardians. Which office after they had undertaken, if they should defraud the Orphans of their patrimonie, or any part thereof, they were sued with a Writ ἐπιτομῆς, as Demosthenes did sue his as soone as he came to age. But if the matter were not questioned within five yeares after the pupill was admitted among the number of men, by the <sup>b</sup>Law the Guardian could not be taxed. Ἀποσασίς, Of a Master against a Servant ingratefull for his manumission, not doing his duty to his Master. Because, as <sup>c</sup>Demosthenes witnesses, it was the nature of servants once made free, not only to be ingratefull, but also to hate their Masters most of all men, as those who had been conscious to their servitude. If any man put away his wife hee was to restore her portion again; if he refused he was ἐπ' ἐνιαυτὸν βολοῖς πικροφάρων, that is, every month for one pound to pay nine oboli which the Atticks terme εἰσόδειον περικῆς, the renew of her dowrie The Writ whereby he was sued was Σίταδική, for the repayment. ἐνοικίε, If any went to Law, as clayming Title to an house, he was first to serve him that dwelled in it with a Writ, ἐνοικίε, by which he demands his rent for the time the defendant had the house; if it were for any parcell of land, there was a Writ κάρπῳ given out, for the provent and fruit thereof; afterwards (in both cases alike) they proceeded to an ἕστας δίκη, in which they claymed right and title to the house or land. Although in all these trialls the defendant were cast, yet could he keep justly either house or land: but if in a third triall, which they call ἐξέλις, he were overthrown, he was compelled to relinquish his possession. This ἐξέλις also is a Writ against those that would cast an inhabitant out of his house, it being termed from ἐξέλειν, to throw forth. It is also a Writ of Execution against any overthrown in the Court, and fined a thousand Drachmes, which at such a day he was to pay; and if he laid it not down upon the nail, there went forth a Writ ἐξέλις, to make enter upon the lands and possessions of him so cast. they forbid to speak false, and yet did in Ἰκαπλιεῖς (Icarus) if any man had bargained for any thing, and another sued and doubted of the right of it, he might require the seller to confirme the lawfulness of the thing sold, and maintaine it against all controuersie, otherwise the seller was liable to Βεβαιώσεως δίκη. For although in Athens they bought for the most part Gracà fide, with ready mony; as <sup>b</sup> Scaliger and Casaubon truly interpret it, <sup>d</sup> Turnebus, Representat à pecuniâ: yet sometime gave they Carniff only to make the thing sure, which the Greeks and Latines call ἄρραβών, from the Ἡβρων βῆν. This seemes to me to have been the hundredth part of the mony which was to be paid for the thing bought, as <sup>e</sup> Stobæus out of Theophrastus: Where you may read likewise that it was the custome, when any thing was to be sold, to bring a note thereof to the Magistrate some threescore daies before.  the appointed time, which they were wont to compell them to do, which they call ἐκλήδειν, after which citation the party was to be at court, or forswear that he saw not the matter, or was not present; otherwise he was to pay a thousand Drachmes, in which summe to be fined the Atticke Laywers give the appellation ἐκκήκετ' εἶδαι. Δώρον χρῆσι, when the Judges were corrupted with bribes. Δικασμὸς against those that did corrupt them. Αργίας of a man convinced of idle-nesse, which once taken Draco punished the delinquent with losse of the City priviledges, Solon not unlesse hee were thrice delinquent. Λειποναύη, when any of the Marriners ran away from their ships. Αναμαχία, when the Marriners that staid in the ships would not fight, if occasion required. Ψευδεγγραφίαι, when any would falsoly accuse, there was likewise against them a writ ἐπιβλασφῆ. Ψευδελυρίας Against those that unjustly cite to the Court. Δωροξητίας, when any is accused of encroaching into the number of Citizens, and gives gifts to escape free. Παρανόμων, when any was accused of making a decree or Law contrary to former statutes. This accusation was called κατομωσία, because the accuser swore that it was against the Lawes or unjust or inconvenient for the Commonwealth. Δοκιμασία was an examination of the Magistrates whether they were fit to govern or no. Whether the Orators were not given to Lust and incontinency, whether they had not spent their patrimonies or dealt unkindly with their parents or led a life any other waies blameable, whereupon they were discarded the priviledges of the City, and not suffered to plead or speake publickly. Ευθωή An account of publicke offices borne, laying out of mony and dispatching Ambassages, made to the Tenne Logista (for the breach of which went out a Writ, Αλογιε λόγου δίδναι, Rationem reddere) if concerning injuries given to the Judges. Πεσολη an accusation against those who are ill affected toward the Commonwealth, made by the decree of the people, and such as are welwishers to the state. Πεσολαι, likewise are accusations against men injurious ἐξυγείσαντας, and such as are delinquent against their festivalls, as the oration of Demosthenes against Midias. Περωμοσία, An oath which the accusers tooke that he would justly accuse. Ἀντιμοσία, The defendants oath that he had done no wrong. Ἐξωμοσία, an oath of Ambassadors or men chosen for state service, that by reason of sickness they cannot give attendance. They may do it by a proxie if they please. It is likewise the oath of one called to witness, wherein he swears that he knowes nothing of the businesse. Ἄπομοσία, When others shall swear that pretended weaknes was only a shift to put off the burthen of publique office which the state laid on them. Υπομοσία an accusation of Law or decree unprofitable, against the motioner, as above said. Παράγρησις & παραμαρτυρία, when a man shall object a case not to be entred rightly, that the writ ought to be such and such, and not as it is ex. gr. for a man that runs away from the Army, which is λεπτοσπῆρις, and I accuse him of leaving his ranke, to wit, λαπηταξίς, or objection of the time past within which space the suit was to be commenced, or that it should be handled in such a Court and not in such, as wilfull murthier in Αρειοπάγης not Falladium, by which evasion if the case fell it was termed ἀγροπία. Αγροπία, when he that is sued puts in a bill against the Plaintiff in like manner. But if the Defendant (I call ἀντιγραφεύριον so) were cast hee payed ἐπωβελίαν. * Μη ἔσκα, when a man is summoned to answer before the Arbitri a controversie, if he sweare that he is sick or pretends a journey from home, and appears not at the day appointed, he was cast in ἐρήμη Ερεμοδισία, as if he scorned to come, or were obstinate, hee ought within ten daies to sue out μη ἔσαν, wherein hee reprov'd the sentence, and made it of no effect so as it came to its first state againe. But if he could not obtaine a μη ἔσαν, having before sworn that he would stand to the award of the Judges, their determination stood in full strength and power and he was constrained to pay a thousand drachmes, as Ulpian, which was the mulct appointed by the law, for the discharge whereof he put in good security, Ἀππαραγγάειν δίκην. When any was absent from the Court, or heard not his name called by the Crier to answer thereunto he was fined, as conscious of Eremodisium, and if within the space of two Months he did not renew the suit (which is ἀππαραγγάειν δίκην) he was sure to pay the fine. Ἐρεπιστάσις, when any man will challenge out of goods forfeited and publikly sold somewhat as debt to him, or say that part belongs to him the state would narrowly search into it, which thing they terme Ἐρεπίσκημα. Περάλησις, is a citing of one before the Arcton in controversie about inheritance, or a virgin left inheritrix. Now if the Plaintiff did not warn the Defendant Ἐπίδεδραμῶτος, the suit died, and such actions are called ἀπέραλητοι δίκαι. * Περάλησις, is as letting a case fall or dissolving it upon some witness, oath, confession extorted by torments, and the like. Ἐφεσις is an appeal from one court to the other, as from the Senate to the people, and from the people to the Senate againe, or from their Judicatories as home to some forrainers in another Country. Ατιμῆσι δίκην when there is no more fine laid upon a man then what his adversay did ἐπιζῆσαι, write downe at the lower end of his inditement; of which custome somewhat hath before been spoken. Βολίτε δίκην, Against such as stole oxe dung out of their neighbours lands; whence of those that are put in the court for triviall matters the proverb Βολίτε δίκην. Ασεβείας of impiety against their Gods, as Aristotle for his hymn on Hermias, Tyrant of the Atarnenses, which he engraved on a statue at Delphos. For revealing mysteries, or imitating them as Alcibiades. Of which if a man were convicted he was put to death; as on the contrary the accuser if he got not the better. Προδοσίας, of being false to the state, the punishment was death, and after that, that they should be cast out of the Territories of Athens unburied. * Αρχαίον, If any owed to the City Treasury, and his name were registred, and before the discharge of the mony his name were blotted out, they sued him before the Thesmotheta αρχαίον, but if his name were never entred he was prosecuted by an ἐσδοτήξιν, Μεταλλικῆ proper only to such as dealt in the mines, like to the Stanneries in the County of Cornwall my Country, and Devonshire her sister. * Lyable to this Court were they who should thrust any man from his work, who should dig within anothers mans liberties, who should bring weapons thither, I suppose to take away Minerals by violence, who should kindle any fire in the Mines, &c. who should offer to take away the props that upheld the weight of the incumbent earth, which to do was death, as Plutarch tells us. There was likewise αρχαίον μεταλλικῆ against the labourers in the Mines, who if they intended to begin a new work were to acquaint the overseers appointed for that end by the people, that the foure and twentieth part of the new coine might come to the publique Treasury. Now if any presumed med to work who had not made it known to the officers, it was lawfull for any to accuse him, ἀρχαίμεδαινας. Αργυμῆς δ. About mony put out to the mony changers. * For ἀργυμῆ among the Atticks is the same that ἐνδίκην in the lawyers of latter time, in Jure Græco. Rom. Sometimes indeed they used ἀργυμῆ for means and sustenance, ὁ πρόβολος ἢ εἰς τὸ ζῆν. Καταδικασίας and καταδικασίωϛ have this difference, that καταδικασίας is the Judge that gives sentence, καταδικασίωϛ is he that put in the controverfie, to be the meanes that the sentence past against the defendant. ἄφρονης is when a man deeply indebted pretends that he is not able to discharge all, and therefore desires the people that a part thereof might be remitted.
